

LABOR DELEGATE

Passed Away at St. John's Hospital

The delegates to the state convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor now being held in Lowell were shocked and filled with grief to learn of the death of one of their number. Reference is made to Jeremiah Mahoney, the delegate from Springfield to the labor convention here. He was taken suddenly ill with acute pneumonia Tuesday night and passed away last night at 10 o'clock at St. John's hospital. Mr. Mahoney's wife was with him during his last moments.

The deceased was a member of the Cigar-makers' union of Springfield and represented that organization at the Lowell convention. He is a resident of 26 Norwood street, Springfield, and at the time of his death was aged 59 years. He is survived by, besides his wife, several children, the oldest being 18 years of age, and the youngest four years old. He was spoken very highly of by those intimately acquainted with him.

The remains were removed to the mortuary parlors of Undertakers J. F. O'Donnell & Sons.

At the adjournment of this forenoon's session of the state convention of the Massachusetts American Federation of Labor, the delegates marched in a body from Associate Hall and viewed the remains as they reposed in the chapel at O'Donnell & Sons. The delegates subsequently accompanied the remains to the Northern depot, as they were being forwarded to Springfield for interment.

ANNUAL DANCE

OF THE SWASTIKA CLUB HELD LAST NIGHT

The O. U. A. M. hall, Middle street, last night, was the scene of the annual dance of the popular Swastika club and it proved a big social and financial success. The interior of the hall was beautified in appearance with white and blue streamers and bunting, which with the glare of the blue and red globes of the electric lights, added to the pleasing effects of the decorative features. Many of the guests were members of the various military organizations of Lowell. During intermission a collation was served, Henry Brothers catering. Music was furnished by the Calumet orchestra. The highly efficient committee in charge was: General manager, Grace C. May; or, assistant general manager, J. L. Van Steenburgh; floor director, Pauline C. Jefferson; assistant floor director, Roswell C. Jefferson; chief aid, Sidney Hall; aids, Mabel Wilson, Blanche Gurney, Emily Wilson, Alfred Hurd, Everett Wainock, and James Falm.

"WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE PUMPKIN"

When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock.
When your business is near ruin and the panic's struck your stock,
When your dinner pail is empty and all prices soar on high,
And you haven't got a nickel in your jeans, a loaf to buy;
Oh, it's then the time a feller is a-felling mighty sick
Of the Grand Old Party's power, of Trust and Money clique,
And he's glad to vote for Bryan, all the rest he gives a knock,
When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Frank Lator, of "Coming Thru" the Rye" fame, presented his latest comic opera, "Prince Humbug" before two large audiences yesterday afternoon and last night.

Lator was as funny as ever and his songs were decidedly clever. They were "Stung," "Hoolihan," and "Googy-Go," and the first was the best. Very taking, too, was his duet with Miss Florence Morrison, "Reina." Miss Morrison by the way, as the queen, made a big hit. She sang and acted very well. Miss Marion Garson was quite pleasing, and her singing was fine, especially in a duet with Harold Crane, who was the prince. Miss Jeanette Bageard, formerly prominent with Rogers Brothers, was excellent. The comedians besides the star were George Pearce and Will H. Sloan. Mr. Sloan made much fun with his German dialect. Chairo Grenville was excellent as the wife of the major, played by Mr. Pearce.

GANS-NELSON PICTURES

Beginning tonight for a three days' engagement, at the Opera House, the great Gans-Nelson light pictures will be seen and without a doubt the theatre will be crowded, for there is a vast interest in these wonderful pictures, which can only be satisfied by actually seeing them. The full 21 rounds will be shown and the knock-out. The pictures were seen in New Haven, Tuesday evening, and the Palladium speaks thusly of them: "Moving pictures galore were the attraction of the Grand Opera House last evening, there being several comic pictures as preliminaries to the advertised Gans-Nelson light pictures. By the time the pictures were ready to start there was a crowded house present. The pictures were clearly shown, and were interesting from start to finish, there being shown the battle ground and the crowd in a vivid manner. The every action of the fighters was portrayed, and to those who saw them, a slight well worth seeing was shown. Ladies as well as men go to see these pictures, for there are absolutely no unpleasant features connected with them, and they are of fully as much interest to the ladies as the men."

SKY FARM

Spectacularly, "Sky Farm" is a delight to the eye. The picture of the maple forest, with its knee-deep of fallen leaves, its bright reds, golden yellows and tearful brown of the autumnal quiver, is a masterpiece of stagecraft. The view of the valley below Sky Farm is one of the sunniest ever shown before the spotlight. In the barn scene, where the six village dance takes place, the scenery almost enters the exhibition drama of new movie play and colored corn stalks in the racks. There are several settings are wonderful examples of delicacy in color and detail.

50 MILES FROM BOSTON

The song hits of George M. Cohan's rural musical play, "Fifty Miles From Boston," which Messrs. Cohan and Harris will present at the Opera House, soon have reached a wide popularity. They are, "Waltz With Me," "Black and Blue," "Harrigan," "The Boys Who Fight the Flamingo," "My Small Town Girl," and "Ain't It Awful."

"THE SIX AMERICAN DANCERS"

HATHAWAY'S THEATRE

"The Devil," being presented by Preston Kendall and company at Hathaway's theatre, this week, will stimulate thought. It is cleverly done and is really a condensation of the most salient points in the noted Hungarian drama, now running successfully in the big cities of two continents. The role of "Mme. Vera," the wife of the wealthy wheat merchant, is filled most acceptably by Miss Fisher, while the young artist who is forced to listen to the evil philosophy of "Dr. Schiefel" is played by Mr. Gordon.

The "Six American Dancers," surely have any other top-dorsetean act in vaudeville beaten a lot. The three young women and young men, six in all, perform wonders on the floor. Charles Leonard Fletcher, an impersonator worth while, displays a rare insight into character. His impersonation of Mark Twain, at the banquet table, is one of much fidelity, even as to vocal distinctiveness. The three Dickens characters are welcome. Mr. Fletcher concludes his act with the light-house scene from "Barnaby Rudge."

The other acts on the bill are: Gray & Graham, in a mélange of music and comedy, Robert's animals, the Berkes, Griff the juggler and the Hathascope. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening during the remainder of the week, while Saturday afternoon Robert's animals will be out through a few extra paces for the children.

A TELEPHONE ALARM

A telephone alarm summoned a portion of the fire department yesterday afternoon to a neat fire on land belonging to the Shaw company near Main-factory street, off upper Chelmsford street. It proved a troublesome blaze and took the firemen some little time to suppress it.

THEATRE VOYONS

Today the Theatre Voyons offers as its feature picture "A Ranchman's Love" and it will surely please. This picture was taken in the state of Washington in the wildest part and the stage pictures are superb. The story of the picture tells is one of interest not only from a sentimental standpoint but it is sensational, too. The characters are all expert horsemen and their individual bravery and daring lend much to the interest of the story.

There are several other pictures, some laughable and some dramatic, but all the very best. The songs will be sure to make a hit for they are specially selected.

THE BRIGHAM LECTURES

Nat M. Brigham's course of illustrated lectures, the first one of which, "The Apache Warpath," is to be given in Coliseum hall on Tuesday night, should prove a success in Lowell for two reasons. In the first place, Brigham was a member of the notable Unitarian church choir of 30 years ago, before he went west to the plains, and has a host of old friends here who should give him a hearty greeting. In the second place, his lectures rank with those of the late John L. Stoddard and Burton Holmes and are beautifully illustrated and of absorbing interest. They represent years of study and are a part of Brigham's own life on the frontier, and they cannot be heard without great profit as well as pleasure to the audience. The sale of tickets is now on at Edward Ellingwood's drug store, and it is urged that tickets be secured at once. The course is $1.50, and single admission 50 cents. A special rate has been made for high school and Textile school and Normal school pupils, 75 cents for the course.

BILL MCKINNON

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 15.—Bill McKinnon's aggressiveness won him a draw in his 15-round battle with Jack Robinson of Chicago before the Standard A. C. of Lymanville last night, for, although the Windy City middleweight had the better of the last seven rounds, the Boston boxer's early lead and his willingness to constantly mix it throughout the bout won him an even break.

McKinnon, who Tuesday night had engaged in a hard ten-round battle with Bartley Connolly at Dover, N. H., showed no effect from the previous bout, and last night forced the boxing through-out. His best work was done at close quarters and the short jarring punches which he sent home from all sorts of positions had Robinson succumbing for the first eight rounds. Then the Chicago boy kept away from the Boston boy and contented himself with outboxing and outbucking him. McKinnon, however, did not for a moment cease his rushing and slugging tactics, although at times Robinson's uppers seemed to jar him considerably.

McKinnon's willingness made a big hit with the crowd, although there were some among the spectators who thought that Robinson should have won on account of his good finish. It was a hard, fast bout, both men putting up a sturdy, but clean fight.

In the semi-finals old Patsy Broderick kept Young Joe Grim of this city at bay for eight rounds, and won the decision. It was a tame bout, and neither man did much execution.

Young Mack of Pawtucket put Young Melville of Providence to sleep in the second round of the curtain raiser.

MATRIMONIAL

A very pretty fall wedding took place yesterday afternoon in St. Michael's church when Mr. John J. Riley, the well-known drummer for the Dempsey Co., was united in wedlock to Miss Esther Hurley, of Second street. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. John J. Shaw. The groom was attended by Mr. John Kelley, who acted as bestman, and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Hurley.

After the marriage the bridal party returned to the bride's home on Second street, where the wedding reception was held. The presents received by the couple were of the most beautiful and costly kind and included rich tokens of esteem from the friends of the happy couple.

The bride was attired in a most becoming gown of white silk, which was outlined with net and carried bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore pink silk and a charming pink hat. She carried a bouquet of tea roses.

A new departure in the way of ushers was used at the wedding, Miss Sadie Boyle of this city and Miss Nellie Sexton of Dorchester acting in that capacity. The bride gave presents of pearl stick pins to the ushers while the groom gave tokens of a diamond ring and diamond stick pin to the bridesmaid and bestman.

An orchestra furnished the music at the house. The parlor was tastefully decorated with potted plants. Friends were present from New York, Pittsfield, Fitchburg, North Andover, Lawrence and Methuen.

The young couple departed on the 9:35 train for Boston on their wedding tour. They will visit Atlantic City and will spend the next month in close proximity to that favorite resort. Upon their return they will reside at 26 Second street. They enter married life with the best wishes of a host of friends.

DAWSON—GREENLAW

Miss Florence Chase Greenlaw, of this city, and Mr. Frederick Leroy Dawson, of Fitchburg, were married yesterday, at 10:30 a.m., at the residence of Rev. A. B. Goodacre, 409 Westford street. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson will reside in Fitchburg, where they will be at home to their friends after Nov. 1, at 57 Forrest street.

BERRY—RYAN

Mr. Fred Albert Berry and Miss Alice Josephine Ryan were united in marriage yesterday at noon by Rev. P. G. Alger at the home of the bride, 21 Eighth avenue. Mr. Berry's home is at Concord, N. H. The guests were numerous including, besides those from this vicinity, many from Bar Mills, Me., Laccuna, Pennacook and Dover, N. H., and Ayer, Hubbardston and Lynn. The house was tastefully decorated with hydrangeas and chrysanthemums. The gifts were very numerous and costly and represented the well wishes of a host of friends of the young couple. After a short wedding trip they will reside at Concord, N. H.

LOISELLE—PLOUFFE

Mr. Arthur Loislle and Miss Eva Plouffe were married Monday at Notre Dame de Lourdes church. Rev. Fr. Dubreuil, O. M. I., officiated. Mr. Joseph Loislle, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man and Miss Aurore Loislle, a sister was bridesmaid.

MONTMARQUET—THERIAULT

The marriage of Mr. Arthur Montmarquet and Miss Rose Madeline Theriault took place today. On Tuesday night a number of the friends of the young lady, who was a former telephone operator, were entertained by her at her home in White street. She was presented with a costly mahogany chair. INCENDIARY FIRE

Caused Loss of $75,000 in Worcester

WORCESTER, Oct. 15.—The Church of Notre Dame on Park street, suffered serious damage by fire last night, and two other buildings, occupied by a number of small business firms were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $75,000, of which $30,000 falls on the church.

The fire started in the fruit and wall paper establishment kept by Samuel Stewart in the large wooden building which was formerly used as the North and Worcester railroad station. The roof of the church was partly burned off and the interior badly gutted.

The cause of the fire is not known, but the police are inclined to believe that it was of incendiary origin.

MAY BE FATAL

"STEEPLEJACK" HURT BY FALL FROM STACK

FRANKLIN, Oct. 15.—John Davis, aged 35 years, a painter, well known as a "steepjack" throughout the country, and whose home is in South Rellingham, fell 40 feet from a smokestack on the Heliotype printing company's building, on Fisher street yesterday and sustained probably fatal injuries.

Davis was sitting on a scaffolding, painting the iron smokestack, which is built in sections, when a portion of the stack toppled over and he was precipitated to the ground.

Help from the Heliotype works went to the aid of the injured man, who was unconscious when they reached him. Dr. J. M. Crowley, after making a superficial examination, had Davis removed to the town farm for treatment.

Davis regained consciousness half an hour after the accident. His left leg was broken, two ribs broken, the back of his head cut and bruised and his face cut. It is feared that he sustained internal injuries.

MAZDAZNAN CASE

Continued.

In the Shaw conservator hearing at Cambridge yesterday afternoon John W. McEvoy was sworn in and testified as follows:

John W. McEvoy, Esq., of Lowell was sworn.

He had done business for Mr. Shaw. He had made a will, a temporary will, for Mr. Shaw, a will that afterward was destroyed. That was about 20 years ago.

Mr. McEvoy said he met Mrs. Shaw off and on for years. He did not note any change in Mrs. Shaw, mentally or physically.

Witness said Mr. Shaw frequently spoke about how helpful his wife was, and what she was doing to contribute to the success of his business.

"Did you ever hear Mr. Shaw speak disrespectfully of her husband or son?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"No, she always spoke very respectfully of them," he answered.

"Did you ever hear any reference to monkey origin, or ape origin, or anything of that sort?"

"Never,"

Mr. McEvoy said he had talked with Mr. Shaw recently, not in a professional way, about her business and he thought her mind was clear and her judgment good.

In reply to Mr. Kittredge, Mr. McEvoy said he thought that Mr. Shaw and Mrs. Shaw were worth about $50,000.

Mrs. Frederick W. Farnham, wife of Mayor Farnham, testified as a neighbor and friend of Mrs. Shaw. Mrs. Farnham did not notice anything peculiar about Mrs. Shaw. She had not noted any change in her condition.

She knew that Mrs. Shaw was much interested in charities.

Mrs. Thomas A. Ramsey said she knew Mrs. Shaw for the last 25 years. She had visited her house and Mrs. Shaw visited witness' house.

She never heard Mr. Shaw speak of any visions, never saw any altar in the house. Witness had been in room that had been occupied by Mr. Shaw and Maxwell and did not note anything peculiar there.

She did not note anything in the stories that had been told about Mrs. Shaw as familiar. The stories seemed ridiculous to her.

Asked if she knew anything about Mrs. Shaw's treatment of her husband and son, Mrs. Ramsey said that she knew Mrs. Shaw had been always kind and considerate in her treatment of them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan, Mrs. Ramsey said she had attended lectures at the temple Spenta Maria, Lowell.

"Did you buy any of the books?" asked Mr. Jordan.

"I did not,"

"Did you speak to your husband about Mazdaznanism?"

"No. We talked about it more or less."

"Are you as much interested in Mazdaznanism now as you were then?"

"I didn't continue going to the lectures."

"Did you ever hear Mr. Hanish?"

"I did not."

Mrs. Shaw was on the stand. His plea was a very earnest one.

Judge McIntire stated that he had warned anybody against interfering in any way with the witness by hypnotic or other influence and he believed that with that warning there was anybody in the court room who would dare to interfere.

Mr. Kittredge renewed his request for the removal of Mrs. Hilton and finally said that if the court did not see fit to have her leave the room that she might be assigned to another seat.

A seat, he said, wherein she would not be in a position to see the witness face to face. The court allowed the suggestion and Mrs. Hilton was given a side seat.

It was stated today that the district attorney's office of Middlesex county would start an investigation of the Mazdaznan society of Sun Worshipers, but inquiry at the office of the district attorney elicited the information that no such investigation was contemplated and that no suggestion relative to it had reached that office.

State Officer Charles E. Byrne dropped into the probate court room when the case was on this forenoon, and that fact it appears, stated the report that District Attorney Higgins was interesting himself in the case.

When court came in at 2 o'clock Mrs. Ramsey resumed her testimony.

"Did your husband forbid you to attend the Mazdaznan lectures?"

"He did not."

"Did he ever call it the 'pagan society'?"

"What was his apparent attitude toward it?"

"He didn't care anything about it."

Mr. John M. Farrell, auctioneer, the man who sold Mrs. Shaw's house, testified.

Mr. Farrell said he had not talked with Mrs. Shaw until she sent for him to sell her house. Several days were occupied in preparing for the sale.

Mrs. Shaw said there were things in the house, the best things, that she did not feel like parting with and she arranged the sale that way.

Mr. Farrell said that Mrs. Shaw's house was very neat and orderly.

Asked to tell his observations as to his method of doing business, Mr. Farrell related his conversation with Mrs. Shaw relative to the sale. Mrs. Shaw attended the sale and assisted in every way she could.

Witness did not hear of any visions or other outlandish things. Asked as to the value of real estate in Tyler Park, Mr. Farrell was about to explain when Mr. Kittredge objected. He wanted to ask witness questions, to see if he might qualify. He couldn't ask in answer to the question as to value of the Shaw property he said, "Yes."

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan, witness said he did not see Mrs. Hilton at the sale.

Witness said that he advertised the property, the Shaw home, and he was responsible for that part of the sale which said Mrs. Shaw was selling because she had prepared to leave the city or would to that effect.

Dr. C. E. Bell of Lowell was called and Mr. Wilson asked the question, "How you of late made a great examination of Mrs. Shaw?"

Mr. Kittredge objected, saying that he had asked the question previously and had been refused. The question then was asked as to whether or not Mrs. Shaw had been examined by Dr. Bell.

Dr. Bell was asked the question, "What was the result of your examination?"

can, was called. She knew Mrs. Shaw very well and could note no change in her condition or appearance.

Included in the witnesses at this afternoon's hearing were Lieut. James Brennan of the local police department, Thomas Ramsey of the Belvidere hotel and Charles E. Carter, the well known druggist, who testified that they had known Mrs. Shaw for a number of years, but had never noticed any mental or physical deficiency in her.

Mrs. Ellen Shaw was recalled at 3.15 and it was at this juncture that Lawyer Kittredge asked that Mrs. Hilton be removed from the court room.

In response to the direct examination of Mr. Kittredge Mrs. Shaw testified: "I am 56 years old. I learned to read and write in the district country school, attending school a few months in spring and in the fall. I never had any education beside that. At 14 I worked at home and had no assistance from my parents. I know very little about my mother's people. She had three sisters and a brother, Jesse Maxwell."

Mrs. Shaw then explained the birth and condition of her son, Maxwell, and stated that he was badly injured at his birth and until three weeks old never made a sound. Replying to Mr. Wilson she said that she had never received any advice from Dr. Hanish or Mrs. Hilton relative to the disposal of her property. They had never advised her to sell the house.

Her reason for selling was that the house was too big and expensive for her. She had no call for it. She never had any thought of selling it to the Mazdaznans and never told anyone she was going to. She is perfectly capable of handling her own property at the present time.

Mrs. Shaw said the total amount she had contributed to the Mazdaznan cult was $35, of which she gave $20 to the temple in Lowell, $10 to the temple in Montreal, $5 toward the big organ in Chicago, $5 to the Denver temple, $5 to Los Angeles.

Asked relative to her relationship with Mrs. Dutton, she replied that Mrs. Dutton lived with her for a year and that she and Mr. Shaw had a considerable quarrel, but Mr. Shaw had often expressed the wish that she go away and never come back.

"What did your husband think of Mrs. Dutton as regards to her reputation for truth and veracity?"

"I have heard him say that she was incapable of telling the truth."

Mrs. Shaw was on the witness stand at four o'clock when court adjourned till ten o'clock tomorrow.

POLICE BANQUET

Visiting Delegates to Convention at Festive Board

FRANK K. STEARNS,
Chairman of Police Board, Who Acted
as Toastmaster.

SUPT. WM. B. MOFFATT,
Lowell Police Department.

Fine Menu and Many Speeches Touching Benefits of the Massachusetts Police Association

The delegates to the eighth annual convention of the Massachusetts Police association were tendered a banquet by the Lowell police department last night at the New American hotel.

About 150 delegates and invited guests gathered around the festive board and after discussing an excellent menu listened to inspiring speeches.

Seated at the head table were: Chairman Stearns of the police board and Commissioner Boulger, Supt. Moffatt, Deputy Welch and James A. McQuade of the department. Representative Charles F. Varnum, Supt. William E. Maloney of the Boston & Northern St. R. R., Rep. James E. O'Donnell, James G. Sullivan, Lawrence Cummings of the Boston Globe and E. J. Gallagher, editor of The Sun. The menu was very fine and the arrangements were perfect.

After the dinner had been satisfied James A. McQuade, chairman of the committee on arrangements, stepped to the front and said: "We extend to you a hearty and generous welcome to our beautiful city. We hope that your stay with us will be an enjoyable and instructive one."

"At the last convention Patrolman Edward T. Managan was elected president of the association and I am sorry to say that he is not present tonight, but I am happy to state that he is convalescent and will soon be about. I hope and trust that you will feel that you can make yourself at home in Lowell. We have tried to provide for your amusement while here. Consequently we have invited several gentlemen here tonight who will be able to interest you on several topics.

"We have a man here tonight who at one time was a news gatherer but later entered into another business, but now he is close to the department. I have now, gentlemen, the unbounded pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Frank K. Stearns, chairman of the Lowell police board, who will also act as toastmaster.

Chairman Stearns, amid great applause, arose and spoke in part as follows: "Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates and members of the police board, who form the department in Lowell and throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I give you a most hearty and cordial welcome. I am exceedingly touched, my friends, by the introduction given me by my friend on my left (Chairman McQuade).

"At the time that I was trying to gather news items for the papers he embarked in the police department. He figures up to the standard of a first-class police officer. I also suffer myself that I make a model of a police officer. I must qualify that a little, or my friend will chop off my head tomorrow."

Mr. Stearns then humorously related a story of a "model husband" who found from the dictionary that "model" means a small imitation of the real thing.

"It is a pleasant pleasure at this time for me to introduce to you Deputy Superintendent Redmond Welch."

Mr. Welch spoke in part as follows: "I am going to say a few words to you as police officers. As I sit here this evening it would make the breast of each and every one of you swell with pride if you heard the pleasant remarks of the guests about the culture and physique of the police officers present here this evening. Words of praise have been expressed on all sides."

"About two years ago it remained for a police officer of New Bedford to come here and explain to the police department of Lowell the matter which at the present time has reached noble proportions or what is known as the Massachusetts Police association. There is absolutely nothing secret in our organization. It is not to intrude upon the rights of anyone else but to protect our own and that is what the Massachusetts Police association represents."

"We have interested our citizens as well as the representatives of the general court and they have not been slow in seeing the necessity of the same and as a result of the preaching of our doctrine we have received some important benefits. Whatever benefits the police officer brings to the community, the association is still in its infancy, but we hope in the future to accomplish far greater results than have been accomplished thus far."

"Police officers are appreciative of what is being done for them. In my experience which covers a period of 20 odd years I have seen a change of attitude of the public towards the police officer. The citizen has become educated to the fact that a police officer is of great benefit to the community for without an efficient police force the community is not worth living in."

Charles H. Winslow

Charles H. Winslow, member of the Massachusetts commission of Industrial Education, was the next speaker and started off by telling a humorous story of how he assisted in the passage of the police pension bill while a member of the house of representatives.

"Many and the other foreign countries for to surpass the United States in the duration of a boy when it comes to learning a trade," said the speaker. "This country offers absolutely nothing to a boy who has got to go out and learn a trade. You have or you don't. You speak of the American boy and lady. He is neither lady nor gentleman. He is not educated, as should be. The school system is right for boys who intend to go to college, not for the boys who have to go to work."

Mr. Winslow then went on to explain the education of boys to crafts. He said that the state of Massachusetts is now going to expend $2,500,000 for the purpose of educating boys in crafts in the state. He said that Ireland is now doing the same thing. He said that Ireland is now doing the same thing. He said that Ireland is now doing the same thing.

man whose heart is with this association.

"A number of years ago it was my ambition to bring together the police officers of the Merrimack Valley. We started out by playing ball and I can assure you that those games were as hot as any games played in the National league. Yes, we beat Lowell and Lowell beat us."

He then told about a meeting held for the organization of the association for police officers throughout the state. He said that the association was formed for the uplifting of the police officers. At the meeting in question the speaker said there were but 50 men while today there are 150 in the association.

"The majority of men elected in our cities are not fit to be there. They have a police officer. They knock the police officer and are out to get revenge. One of our aldermen in Haverhill dogged a police officer's footsteps for one year because the officer had made the man move along the sidewalk before he was a city official."

Mr. Brown spoke of the legislation favorable to police officers in this state and concluded by urging the police officers outside the association to join.

E. J. Gallagher

Edward J. Gallagher, editor of The Sun, responded for "The Press" and in his opening remarks he commended the objects of the Massachusetts police association particularly in regard to the insurance and pension features. "There is a very general misapprehension," he said, of the application of the pension system, some people believing that when an officer completes twenty years' service he can claim a pension and enter some other business. This is a mistake. To get a pension at the expiration of twenty years' service an officer must either be disabled or have reached the age of sixty-five years. The pension system thus affords the city an equitable way of retiring officers at an age when their usefulness has passed. (A man sixty-five years old is not adapted for the general work of a police department. Thus the pension system operates to improve the police department in every city in Massachusetts.)

He then showed the important relations between the press and the police departments, and how much can be accomplished by co-operation in the detection of crime and the capture of criminals. He addressed himself to the press and the police and said the press should especially respect the wishes of the probation officer and omit the publication of such names as he may request to be omitted. Some men and many women would rather serve a sentence in jail than have it published in the press that they were convicted of any crime and such publication may defeat all efforts at reform.

The newspapers should be lenient and charitable especially towards the women and children arrested and the police officers by observing the same rule could make the disgrace and humiliation of such unfortunate as light as possible.

He pointed out the revolution in the methods of chasing criminals starting with the patrolman, then the mounted officer, next the bicycle policeman and now the time has arrived when every well regulated department should have an automobile to pursue criminals who may use that means of escape.

The time may come he said with the development of the airship when some member of the police board will recommend the purchase of a flying machine to pursue the criminals to the clouds.

The speaker pointed out the great many outlets from the city and the ease with which criminals can escape as compared with former times. In this relation he told of how much assistance the electric car conductors can give to the police when they read the accounts of crime and description of the criminals in the press. He instanced the fact that a car conductor caught two of the Woburn yeomen at Arlington and turned them over to the police.

In conclusion he pointed out the lack of proper police protection in many country towns and the stupid delay in notifying neighboring cities or even the state police when serious crimes are discovered. There was an illustration of this, he said, in the recent Mathen tragedy and also in the murder of Miss Mullins at Arlington. In both cases the town officers bungled until the culprits had time to escape or else to destroy all evidence connecting them with the murders. He said there should be a law compelling the police of every town to notify the police of the neighboring city at the earliest possible moment after discovering a murder or any serious crime, and if necessary for assistance from the neighboring city, as well as from the state police. The county, he believes, should pay whatever expenses might be incurred by a city in helping a neighboring town to capture criminals.

Supt. William B. Moffatt

Supt. William B. Moffatt of the police department, was then called upon and he said: "Mr. Toastmaster and you gentlemen, who make and administer the laws of this state, I wish to say that on March 8, 1881, I was appointed a supernumerary officer in the Lowell police department. I do not see a great deal of change in the physical condition of the officers of today and that of 27 years ago. I believe, however, that the mental condition has improved very much. When I became a member of the force there were 62 members including supernumerary officers. Today there are but 12 of those remaining, all the rest having ceased to be members of our department, the greater majority having passed across the river."

Today in Lowell we have 143 supernumerary officers and members in the department and 11 regular officers. These improvements have been brought about by the great improvements in the scientific and industrial world. Science gave us the Bertillon system and later the finger print system. The Bertillon was not generally adopted (excepting in the larger cities because of the expense) but it was the best known system for many years and aided those cities who had adopted it to apprehend criminals.

When I was at the St. Louis exposition I met J. K. Farrer, a Scotland Yard detective, he having brought with him to this country the celebrated finger print system. It is very cheap to maintain and no city or town can afford to do without it. The whole outfit does not cost more than $10.

The superintendent then went on to explain the working of the system.

Continuing he said: "Lowell was the first department in the United States to adopt the finger print system. We went before the legislature and as a result a criminal bureau of investigation was established. He urged the representatives of visiting departments to take up the system without delay and told how it assisted in arresting a man after having been arrested for some crime."

Speaking along the lines of improvement and showing how much easier it was for a criminal to escape at the present time made mention of the fact that 27 years ago there were but six car lines running in this city, while today there are 15 and six of those lead to different cities and towns and that there was an excellent chance for a criminal to make his escape.

In conclusion he said: "You must not forget there is nothing that will bring promotion any better or faster than by doing your duty faithfully and then when the opportunity comes, you will be called to something better."

Letters of regret were received from Lieut. Gov. Draper, Roger G. Sullivan of Manchester, Tyler A. Stevens of the common council, Supt. Thomas Loss of the Boston & Northern, President Henry A. Smith of the board of trade, Secretary John A. McKenna of the board of trade, Senator Joseph A. Hibbard and Philip S. Madden, also a letter from Gov. Guild.

Rep. James E. O'Donnell

Representative James E. O'Donnell of this city spoke on "The Commonwealth." He said: "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is one of the oldest, most conservative and best governed states in this Union. It has been my pleasure to represent a certain district this year."

"You, gentlemen, are the guarantors of our peace, the protectors of our homes. When in our retirement at night you are looking always that harm will not befall us. I have found our policemen honest, faithful and courteous in their dealings. In conjunction with my colleagues we secured for you one day in thirty, a day of recreation."

"I think that the Commonwealth is generous to its servants. All it asks of you is to do the tasks assigned you and do them well. Gentlemen, I thank you for this opportunity to meet you tonight and I wish you success in all your undertakings."

Lawrence Cummings

Lawrence Cummings was introduced as "The Man of the Hour." He said: "I have found in the police department as good friends as any man would want to find in a day's walk. I believe that if a police officer while on duty killed he should be cared for if disabled and in case of his death his wife and family should be properly cared for. I have found as brave men in the police department as in other walks of life, and I believe that this association is of great benefit to the state. Mr. Cummings related many instances of heroic bravery shown by police officers.

Supt. Wm. E. Maloney

Supt. William E. Maloney, of the Boston & Northern, then spoke as follows: "First of all I wish to thank the invitation committee for the opportunity to be present at this gathering tonight. It is a pleasure indeed because I am a thorough believer in any organization or association of men which helps to further their interests, and better their conditions. I am a thorough believer in co-operation, which can be brought about only by a feeling of mutual interest, and the great problem of today is how to develop that interest. Your method strikes me as being better than that of any organization I have in mind. There never has been a time, I dare say, in the memory of anyone seated about this table tonight, when the minds of the people were so bewildered, so disturbed and depressed as at the present time. BIG LABOR RALLY

Stirring Addresses by Messrs.
Golden and McCarthy

JOHN GOLDEN.

Lowell a Badly Organized City—
Hours of Labor Longer and
Wages Lower Than in Most
Other Cities—Street Parade

The much heralded rally and parade of the American Federation of Labor which is now holding its state convention in Lowell, was held last night and proved an unqualified success.

At 7:30 o'clock the procession was formed on Merrimack street in front of the Soldiers' monument and headed by the Lowell National band, Richard Griffiths leader, marched over the route mentioned in yesterday's Sun. All trades and labor unions of Lowell were represented in the parade.

On reaching Associate hall, the scene of the rally, the assembly was called to order by Mr. Joseph Convery of Lowell, who in fitting words introduced the state president, Philip H. Sweet.

After the latter had stated the purpose of the rally, he introduced Mr. John Golden of Fall River, the well-known president of the United Textile Workers of America.

John H. Golden's Address

Mr. Golden was given a rousing reception and among other things said: "I am indeed surprised when I become acquainted with the unorganized conditions in Lowell. Why is it? The employees of Lowell are the very same as the employees of other cities, and this causes us naturally to conclude that it is the employers and not the employees who are primarily responsible for the conditions which are found here. We come here tonight to suggest a way out of it."

"We hear the rumbling of unorganized labor, as well as organized labor. These rumblings are requests for privileges which are enjoyed by others. They are not special privileges, but fair and square requests—requests which we must have one way or another." At this point the speaker discussed the injunction law at considerable length, and then launched into the necessity of organization, especially in this city. "I know," continued the speaker, "that many efforts have been made to rebuild textile organizations in your city, but such a move cannot be brought to a successful point unless the men and women workers of the city show some life and energy. I ask you men here tonight to get together in your different crafts and do something for yourselves. Compare your conditions with the conditions found in other similar cities of New England. In comparison, you will find that the people of other cities enjoy much better and fairer conditions."

During the recent depression we have found it very difficult to keep our organizations together, but we have succeeded, thanks to the healthy endeavor of those actively engaged in them.

"To bring about and realize our desires we must scrutinize the men who are looking for public office. Question them, and if they promise to support our cause—which is indeed a worthy one—we should look upon them as our friends, but if they don't, we must look upon them as our enemies and do our utmost to defeat them. It behooves us to take a more active part in the elections and our slogan should always be: Elect our friends and defeat our enemies."

F. H. McCarthy

The next speaker was the general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. F. H. McCarthy, who

JOHN ARBUCKLE

Will Try to Save
Cruiser

John Arbutuckle, the sugar refiner and noted philanthropist of New York, is to undertake the floating of the cruiser Yankee, which three weeks ago went ashore off Spindle rocks, at the entrance of Buzzards bay. He has entered into a contract for this purpose with Secretary Metcalf, the consideration being $37,500. Mr. Arbutuckle is required to expend up to $50,000 in the prosecution of the work, and if then his efforts are unsuccessful and the attempt to float the ship has to be abandoned the government will pay him $25,000. Mr. Arbutuckle does not hope to make a profit out of the transaction, but is willing to risk his money with the hope of saving the ship. Compressed air will be used in the undertaking.

was warmly received. After entering into his address Mr. McCarthy said: "Lowell is a business center is known all over the country, but I must say that organized labor here is the weakest known in the country. Judging from the size of this evening's rally I must naturally conclude that the people here are too busy to attend to their own business."

"Lowell as an organized center has receded considerably during the past eight years, in fact it is the worst organized city in New England. What is the cause? It certainly cannot be contentment on the part of the masses, for the conditions here, as I know them, are not sufficient to warrant that. Neither do I believe it is despair. I want to call your attention to the fact that whatever the conditions of labor are in this locality, the working class is directly responsible for it. The business class is allowing the employer to establish a standard and they are not plucky enough to stand up and fight for better conditions."

Mr. McCarthy referred to the long work hours and smaller wages, saying: "Until the people of this section wake up and demand what is right, they will remain in the same old, discontented state. The hours of labor here are longer and the wages smaller, on an average, than any other city of New England. The cause for better conditions in other cities is the activity and personal interest shown by the laboring people. The employers of Lowell have the same Christian feeling in their hearts for their employees as the employers of other cities, but they won't pay any more or have their labor work any less hours than labor forces upon them."

The speaker emphatically asserted that the laboring people should get their rights and added: "I would like to bring you laboring people of Lowell to a realization of what organization would mean to you, and I hope to witness, in the very near future, a change in organization, such as will convince you that the people of Lowell have fully awakened to what rights belong to them and get them. You can do it if you only concentrate your efforts towards that end."

The two last speakers who held the audience till 10 o'clock, were Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts state branch of the American Federation of Labor, and William E. Spruille, president of the Lowell Street Railway Men's union.

PETERSBURG, Oct. 15.—After having been confined in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul for ten months, Nicholas Tschakovsky, a member of the Russian revolutionist organization, is to be released by order of the Russian government. But N. Tschakovsky was obliged to furnish $25,000 bail, pending his trial, the date for which has not yet been fixed.

As the decision of the government becomes effective immediately, Tschakovsky's daughter is now making an endeavor to raise the sum, but as cash bail is required and the amount is large, it may be several days before Tschakovsky leaves the fortress.

EMORY IS DYING

He Was Shot by His Companion

LYNN, Oct. 15.—Elwin S. Emory, the 15 year old son of M. Oscar Emory, of 62 Eastern avenue, is dying at the Lynn hospital as the result of being shot in the side by his companion, Horace Wiley, in a mysterious manner, late this afternoon. Young Wiley is 14 years old, and the son of Frank Wiley of Chocery street. The two boys, with others, had been hunting. According to Wiley, the 22 caliber Robert rifle, which he was carrying, accidentally went off, just how he does not know, and the bullet entered the Emory boy's side. The other boys, however, state that Wiley was illustrating a "load-up" that he ordered Emory to hold up his hands, and taking a firing posture, accidentally or otherwise, killed the other.

Emory was estranged on late last night but the doctors say there is no hope of his recovery.

Young Wiley was taken into custody by the police.

PYTHIAN SISTERS

Opened Convention at Pythian Hall

The district convention of the Pythian Sisters opened yesterday at 3 o'clock in Pythian hall, this city, and will continue throughout this evening. The report of the minutes of the last convention was read and accepted, as was the report of the treasurer. Routine business was transacted and an adjournment made for supper.

This evening a regular meeting will be held at which there will be initiations. About 100 delegates were present at the convention.

Kidney disease advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. There is a dull pain in the back, headache, dizzy spells or a tired worn-out feeling, or if the urine is dark, foul-smelling, irregular and attended with pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the statement of this Lowell citizen: "E. Delany, living at 1540 Middlesex st., Lowell, Mass., says: 'I do not hesitate one moment in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills as I have found them very beneficial. For some time I was troubled with a lameness in the small of my back. It was hard for me to get up after I had been sitting for some time and just as difficult for me to straighten after stooping. The several remedies I used gave me no relief, and I was finally induced to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, having heard so much about them. I procured them from Ellingwood & Co.'s drug store, and they gave me more relief than anything I had previously used. My back is now strong and the lameness has disappeared.'

GERMAN BALLOON

THE ONLY ONE NOT YET ACCOUNTED FOR

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Only one of the 23 balloons that started in the race for the international trophy on Sunday from Schmargendorf is unaccounted for. This is the German balloon, Busley, under the command of Dr. Niemeyer, with Hans Hiedemann, as assistant.

Dispatches received here early in the day from Cuxhaven announced that the Spanish contestant, Castilla, had dropped into the ocean six miles north of Heligoland and that the navigators Montolo and Robero, had been rescued by fishermen.

Last evening a despatch was received from Molde, Norway, telling of the descent of the Swiss balloon Helvetic, to the ocean and the rescue of Colonel Schaeck and E. Messur. The despatch reads as follows:

"Fishing boat this afternoon rescued occupants of balloon Helvetic at the last moment as they were sinking, the balloon being totally exhausted. The balloon was saved. Schaeck and Messur remain here over night and proceed to Christiansund tomorrow."

Molde is only 22 miles southwest of Christiansund and in order to reach this point the Helvetic must have travelled about 155 kilometers, or 77 miles, in a direct line, and must have travelled over the Skagerrak, or the still greater body of the North Sea. This is by far the greatest distance yet reported to the credit of any of the contestants, the majority of whom either took a somewhat circular course or were compelled to descend on account of their proximity of water.

The Helvetic is the fifth balloon among the international contestants to come to grief, the Conqueror and the Montones bursting at a high altitude, and the Saint Louis and Castilla being wrecked on the North Sea. Al-

Sworn to by John H. Harrington, proprietor, Martin H. Reldy, business manager, and Alfred Pilotte, pressman, of The Sun, before me, January 1, 1908.

JAMES E. O'DONNELL, Notary Public.

This is by far the largest net average circulation of any newspaper in Lowell.

THE PRESIDENT'S SILENCE.

The recent silence of Mr. Roosevelt is becoming ominous. It is feared by his friends that he will experience something in the nature of an explosion if he cannot vent his feelings in favor of Taft before the election is over. His last venture in that line, however, went wrong and was calculated to injure rather than help Taft. Mr. Bryan gave him a delightful dressing and taught him a much needed lesson in regard to entering a public controversy.

DUTY OF DEMOCRATS.

Now that registration is over it is the duty of democrats to work hard for the success of their ticket. Here in Lowell, besides giving loyal support to the national ticket headed by William Jennings Bryan, the democrats will have to stand by their candidate for senator, James E. O'Donnell. Mr. O'Donnell has a very creditable record in the legislature, having in various ways promoted the interests of his constituents and of the city of Lowell through legislative channels.

HOSPITAL FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

The city of Lawrence is to have a hospital for tuberculosis. It appears that in that city last year there were 143 deaths from this disease, while over 1200 persons are at the present time suffering in various stages of the disease and requiring the most skillful medical treatment. If there are so many cases in Lawrence it is safe to say that there are many more in this city, and that such a hospital is needed in Lowell even to greater extent than in Lawrence. The efforts of the General hospital in this city to provide treatment in the summer time is wholly inadequate to meet the situation. We need a hospital all the year round. Lawrence is to be congratulated on having established a hospital by which the ravages of this disease may be successfully combatted.

ORGANIZED LABOR WITH BRYAN.

Organized labor throughout the country is showing very commendable loyalty to the policy of Mr. Gompers and John Mitchell in supporting Mr. Bryan. The central unions of New York and Philadelphia have formally adopted Bryan resolutions, and the same course has been followed by labor bodies in several other important labor centres.

Meanwhile the republicans are endeavoring to check the influence of Mr. Gompers' campaign by charging that he has promised to "deliver" the labor vote to Mr. Bryan. Working men of intelligence know this to be a piece of republican claptrap, and it is on a par with some of the things said about the democratic party by Candidate Debs who is evidently working for Taft more than for socialism.

EVEN DALZELL IS SCARED.

From every part of the country comes the intelligence that the republicans are on the run all along the line. For the first time since he entered congress, a quarter of a century ago, John Dalzell, who may be regarded as the high priest of Dingleyism, is making a personal canvass of his district. He feels quite as much alarmed as does Speaker Cannon.

The standpatners are aroused throughout the country as never before. They foresee a democratic landslide and are trying to avert it. Appeals are being made to Wall street and to money kings for increased contributions, and orders are being sent quietly along the line to intimidate labor into voting for Taft by the threat that should Bryan be elected the mills and work shops will be shut down for an indefinite period. The toilers are not disposed to be thus coerced nor to accept a bluff that is intended to help re-elect the republican ticket.

THE NEW HAVERHILL CHARTER.

The city of Haverhill has adopted a new city charter modeled on the Des Moines commission plan. The features of this new charter are so radically different from any city charter now in force in this state that the progress of the Haverhill city government under the new system will be watched with great interest by the other cities of the state. The government is to be concentrated in the hands of the mayor and four aldermen who will displace the twenty-two members of the city council. The mayor is to receive $2500 a year and the four members of the commission $1000 each. Party designations are to be eliminated and the "recall" and referendum, two of the most radical provisions of the western charters are also included in the new charter.

By the "recall," officials duly elected may be removed during their term of office by popular vote on account of some specified cause.

The initiative and referendum may be applied to the change of city ordinances so that the people of Haverhill can rejoice in having the most democratic charter in this part of the country. The school board is preserved as a separate body under the statutes, and it is provided that no appropriation can be made unless after a week's written notice. The charter was drawn by Judge Charles J. Winn assisted by Justice Moody of the federal supreme court and United States District Attorney Boyd B. Jones. Were it not for the high reputation and the wide influence of these three men the people of Haverhill would scarcely have dared to vote for a charter having such radical provisions. There is little doubt, however, that the new charter will work well in practice, and if any defect should be found, as is likely to be the case, it can be easily remedied by a special act of the legislature.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WANT TO KNOW WHY

Providence Tribune. If in his annual Thanksgiving proclamation, President Roosevelt finds many things for which to be grateful, some of the enemies he has made may be pardoned for insisting that he point them out.

GLAD TO SEE IT TRIED

Ruston Post. In some ways it would be ungrateful to find the court and the new Haverhill charter invalid because technically defective. All of us would like to see the experiment tried of government by commission, even in the incomplete and untried case of Haverhill. And most of us would prefer to see it tried in Haverhill rather than in our own town.

LIQUOR ADVERTISING

Sprague Union. Because a newspaper may not advocate non-licensing, believing that the liquor traffic is better regulated by the license system, we have sometimes heard it said that the newspaper is influenced solely by business considerations. Of course we don't expect to get much help from the news-papers, said a bar-tender worker, speaking at a rally in one of the western cities recently, "because they have too much regard for their liquor advertisements. Their consciences are dulled by the receipts of the counting room." This is a view that seems to obtain quite generally among those that are working for temperance through the medium of non-licensing, but which at almost any newspaper published in a non-licensing territory, and it will be seen that the business interests of the paper are well served by local prohibition. Take, for instance, that excellent newspaper, the Birmingham Age-Herald, published in "dry" Alabama. A recent issue contains 10 pages, or more than five columns of liquor advertisements, mostly of Chattanooga, Tenn., dealers. These advertisements, unlike the citizens of Birmingham to send on their money, and the goods will be shipped in "plain packages." From this it would appear that non-licensing is a distinct advantage to a newspaper commercially, for where a license obtains a newspaper derives little revenue from liquor advertisements.

PEOPLE OF NOTE

Miss Annie S. Peck of Providence, R. I., who has just succeeded in climbing Mount Mauncie in the Andes, is a graduate of Michigan university, class of 1878, studied in Germany and Athens and was for a time professor of Latin in Smith college. She is a believer in woman suffrage and declares that if one woman has perseverance to climb to the top of a 25,000 foot mountain the sex in general ought to be able to get the right to vote.

Orville Wright, who has been living at the Fort Myer hospital since the wreck of his aeroplane several weeks ago, will be allowed to return to Dayton, Ohio, in about three weeks to finish his convalescence at home, according to the opinion of the physicians attending him. No uneasiness is felt over Mr. Wright's condition, but it has been found that his nervousness has increased from the forced inaction, and that any protracted conversation sends his temperature up a little. Nearly all visitors are in consequence denied access to him. It is now thought likely that Mr. Wright will be able to carry out his wish and finish the tests he had begun when the accident brought him to a sudden stop. The time limit for answering the requirements of the war department has been so extended that the final tests will not come off until some time next summer, and Mr. Wright is determined that he will "make good" before they are over.

that London is rapidly becoming a modernized city.

"Why," said the Englishman, "we are building skyscrapers here the same as you have in New York. Look at this one which has just been completed," and he pointed to the British Medical Association building, in the Strand. "There is a skyscraper for you! Doesn't that look like New York?" Mr. Powers carefully scrutinized the structure—six stories—and said: "In New York they would call that a cellar."

Plans have been completed throughout Connecticut for an elaborate celebration on Friday of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Noah Webster. Special features have been arranged in New Haven and Hartford, both of which claim him as a native—Hartford because of his birth there and New Haven because it was there his books were written. It is likely that his over the country school children will devote the afternoon to exercises in honor of the man who compiled the dictionary, gave the country its first spelling book and its first grammar text book. At Yale the exercises will centre on his philological work. Webster wrote his dictionary largely in New Haven, beginning it about 1793 and finishing it twenty years later. Several years of that time, however, were spent in Amherst, Mass., because his financial resources were limited and he could live cheaper there. His stay in Amherst set under way the movement which culminated in the founding of Amherst college. Webster was born in 1758 in Hartford, prepared for Yale at the home of his parents and was graduated in the class of 1778. In his junior year he left his studies to shoulder a musket and help in repelling Burgoyne's invasion. He died in this city in 1843, at the age of 84. He is buried in the Grove street cemetery, beside Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin.

President Eliot of Harvard university has invited "Jim" Fagan to deliver a course of lectures to the students and others on railroad matters and other subjects. James G. Fagan is not a railroad president, but he is a plain signal tower man on the Pittsburg division of the Boston & Maine railroad. Fagan seems to know more in a common sense way about the railroad problem or problems of this country than any man for whom we have read the railroad question became one of the vital topics of discussion. He has published a book entitled "Confessions of a Railroad Signaller." He is a thorough student of other subjects as well, being widely read and well informed.

Wm. Archer, the critic and prophet of Ibsenism, has been writing to the London Morning Leader on the subject of "American Manners." In the article he says:

"Are the Americans the politest people on the face of the earth? Or the rudest? There are times when I would reply to the former question with a cheerful affirmative; but other times when my whole smarting soul goes over with vehemence to the other opinion. The truth is, of course, that in America, as in other countries, different classes of people have different standards of manners; so that any embracing generalization is absurd. "But first for the other and more essential side of the case. There is certainly no living creature that stands higher in the scale of true humanity than your cultivated, kindly American gentleman. His manner is delightful and he is unwarred, not only in hospitality, but in the still higher quality of considerate helpfulness.

"New York city from an architectural point of view is so absolutely ridiculous unreasonable, and most stupid as to make it appear, in fact, as though planned by a lunatic." This is the opinion of M. Augustin Rey, French architect, member of the superior council of the Dwelling Houses of Paris, and official representative of the French government at the recent International Tuberculosis congress in Washington. In coming to this conclusion, M. Rey said he had in mind particularly the skyscrapers of which New Yorkers are so proud. "They are very dangerous," he declared, speaking through his friend, George B. Ford, who acted as interpreter, "and within twenty years the city will require even the highest to be chopped in half, because the public will be aroused to the menace they bring to the community. In twenty years the income from these huge buildings will have paid for their construction, and by that time the public will rise up and alter things." As for the reasons why skyscrapers were dangerous and a menace to the community, M. Rey said the congestion they caused was one reason; that is to say the immense number of people they temporarily housed caused the congestion.

FOOTBALL PLAYS

Some That Interest the Fans

Football, like baseball, is commanding more attention this year than it ever did before. In the published schedules of games to be played before Dec. 5 there are no fewer than 640 contests between eleven of universities, colleges and academics, to say nothing of the hundreds of high schools and other institutions that have teams. It has been estimated that there are 750,000 men and boys playing football in America. These illustrations show some of the plays between some of the teams of the eastern universities and the tandem play at present that the backs are tussling for the line. The cut is designed to cover any of the games scheduled for Oct. 17. Prominent among these are: Penn versus Brown, Harvard versus Springfield, Cornell versus Colgate, Annapolis versus Lehigh, Yale versus West Point, Chicago versus Illinois, Michigan versus Notre Dame, Iowa versus Missouri, Wisconsin versus Indiana, Oklahoma versus Kansas, Tennessee versus Kentucky, Georgia Tech. versus South Carolina and Louisiana state versus A. M. of Texas.

BOARD OF TRADE

Hears Address on Business Organization

The board of trade opened its fall season at Odd Fellows temple last evening with a well attended meeting preceded by a banquet, the latter being served from 6.30 to 7.30.

Pres. H. A. Smith was in the chair and gave an interesting review of business conditions in Lowell during the past six months. Jesse H. Shepard addressed the gathering on "Business Organizations Past and Present."

The principal speaker of the evening was Edward A. Filene, one of Boston's merchant princes, whose address was on "Coming Changes in Business Organizations, Public and Private."

Free Smith in the course of his remarks said:

"General business in our city is still less than normal, as the improvement among our textile mills everywhere is very slow. One of the last industries to feel the full effects of the depression, it is naturally one of the last to recover."

"A survey of general conditions, however, cannot but convince one that business is slowly enlarging. Iron and steel interests are busier than at any time, for this year, northern lumber shipments have greatly increased, and the exports of grain much heavier than last year and at higher prices."

"The bank clearances are increasing and the report of last week shows the principal cities to be within 6.2 per cent. of the same week of last year. Bank deposits and losses show marked increases and the surplus of idle money is slowly decreasing."

"If such optimistic opinions prevail over the whole field, it cannot be long before the local industries will feel the rising tide of growing demand. The turn of the year should show a marked improvement on all sides."

Mr. Filene's Address

Mr. Filene spoke in part as follows: "Ideas go out of date as fast as machinery does. We must accept this condition of affairs and add to the scrap heap of ideas just as we continuously put machinery into piles or worn-out iron and steel."

"The 19th century was the great century for the rights of the individual. It succeeded centuries of inherited rights and special rights and royalty. And the 19th century worked out a new right, the right of the individual. The happiness of the few was of more account in the last century than the privileges of the many. Society today needs the freedom of the individual, but, above all, it needs the capacity of the individual in conjunction with other men, in order to produce the best results."

"The world needs the greatest sum total of freedom. All history is the history of a struggle towards democracy. There have been three great democracies, religious democracy, political democracy and industrial democracy. Most of us have been accustomed to think of democracy as purely political. But all three democracies are inseparable. What one gains the others are bound to gain eventually. The recognition of this principle is at the bottom of the coming changes in business."

"Employees outnumber employers ten to one. All over the world there is a turning towards socialism. In the German empire there are over 1,500,000 socialists while in England they are dominant and the socialist movement is growing all the time. If we do not recognize that they have got the power industrially we are going to have the socialist government ownership and then government production will follow."

"But I think that can be averted. That's what I mean when I say that ideas must go to the very heart once in a while. There is nothing like a personal experience to school a man. A few years ago my brother and I spent half of our time in trying to settle disputes with our employees. Then we figured it out that we would give our employees some power, and if that didn't solve the problem we would give them more power. There is scientific basis for that. There isn't one man in 100 but will criticize. There is a criticism which is constructive but which comes very late, if at all, to men."

"When the employees in our store made rules for themselves they were really changed. They sought to enforce the rules they had formulated and their interest in doing so was wonderfully keen. It worked well and so we soon gave up the veto power we held. We have only good to report on this experiment."

"We agreed to arbitrate any difficulty which might arise. The matter of discipline and enforcing rules is arbitrated. And there is nothing in our whole system so strong as the scheme of arbitration. The most far reaching troubles many times have their beginnings in friction between some man recently out of the ranks and those under him. Under our system all, including ourselves, must submit to this arbitration tribunal. There are nine members of the board and they know more about the men in the store than we do, or ever will know. It is a foreman who has caused trouble is worth saving he is a man who will mend his ways and change his point of view. We realize our success to the new methods; they are very much better than the old ones. We have all sorts of suggestions offered for the betterment of the relations existing between us and our employees and we offer prizes for the best ideas."

"In conjunction with the store are a library, dining room, three doctors one dentist, a manicure and other things, all managed by the employees; not by us. No question of our beneficence can, therefore, possibly enter the heads of those who are to arbitrate any dispute."

"I have touched only the surface of this great subject. If I have succeeded in showing that the wise men, whose success is wholly that of running a business, or to know books, but that they are the men who have sympathy, the men who make their knowledge receivable by those who need it, then I have done what I wished to do. Men who are preached to continually that the highest thing in government is to hold a voice in that government will not stop until they have a voice in their work."

Mr. Filene at the close of his address. Mr. Filene was accompanied to this city by his private secretary, Richard Waterman.

Continued.

Republicans of one and democrats of another by a system used in a sewing circle or a "dally gab association," and it is ridiculous to think that the high position of the president of the United States must be dragged into the mud, and the voters influenced by the personalities of the candidates, and their satellites, sacrificing the confidence of the voters, and destroying their faith in the leaders of the country. No wonder we have labor troubles, no wonder the republicans don't know whether they will vote their ticket or some other ticket, and vice versa with the democrats. No wonder we have the socialists going about the country instilling in the minds of the people that they are laboring under a bond of slavery, and have the socialist labor party, and the independent democratic party, and no one willing to trust the other.

"The supply and demand make the business of the country, but everybody is so suspicious, so much in fear of their own personal profits and welfare that the wheels of the industries have stopped turning. The first medicine to aid the situation is to restore confidence; but how is it to be done? I say, by electing proper parties to office, and the only gauge by which a man should be measured for office is his intelligence and reliability. A man's degree of intelligence should not be measured by the extent he conforms to our own religious or political beliefs. Men must be selected who have made the best use of their intelligence and time, and this can only be known by the products of their labor and their reputation among their fellow workers."

"With such men in office some degree of satisfaction could be obtained for the working people. One phase of the national ill is the inflation of capital, and where good dividends could be paid on a property that could show a dollar invested in property for a dollar in capital, there are many corporations that cannot pay a dividend because of overcapitalization. Their property does not represent their capital, and every dollar of capital above the amount of the actual investment is yoked about the necks of the toilers on which to make a dividend."

"I believe that each state should appoint a labor commission to represent the people, and give them a corps of auditors with government authority to see that every dollar of capital is invested in property or legitimate investment in property or legitimate investment in property. This is what the Massachusetts street railway commission is appointed for, and in this state every dollar of capital in an original company of the state must be represented by property, and I believe that every corporation, trust, or holding company should be made by the government to show a dollar invested for every dollar in capital. Capital and labor are necessary to each other, but they are not on very friendly terms, and they never will be while they try to cure hate with hate. What a great stride labor could make if it confined itself to promoting state and national laws to regulate the differences with capital instead of resorting to strikes and interference of every nature. Take, for example, this state, and see what a solid organization any special class of workmen could have if they confined themselves to a state organization, paying all of their dues into the state treasury for the purpose of granting laws that would be beneficial to their institutions. I do not mean only this state, but every state in the Union. What influence they could have if they made the best use of their time in selecting proper candidates to represent them in the senate and legislature, securing men who are trustworthy. By this I mean that if a labor union knows a man to be honest and trustworthy to ask him in the name of the body to be a candidate for office to represent them. Then there would be the same honor to office, and the official would be bound by honor due to his people. And I say if you want honest government, honest politics, the toilers must seek the candidates, and not the candidate seek the office. I believe you, the police association of Massachusetts have the best kind of an organization for all concerned, and my best wishes are that you will get two days off each month before the end of the next legislature."

SUPT. WILLIAM E. MALONEY, B. & N. Street Railway.

James O'Sullivan, representing the Lowell Board of Trade, spoke along a humorous line. He spoke of the general excellence of the fire and police departments of this city and in conclusion paid glowing tributes to Chief Heuser and Asst. Moffatt. He represented the board of trade and discussed that organization and the city of Lowell, closing with best wishes for the Massachusetts Police association.

NIGHT EDITION

MRS. HELEN SHAW

She Admits That She Took Dew Baths

Interest in the Mazdaznan case was maintained today by the testimony of the respondent, Mrs. Ellen F. Shaw. Mrs. Shaw admitted taking a dew bath as a matter of convenience. She said there is an altar in her house and declared that it was used to speak of it in open court because it was a sacred, consecrated spot where there were pictures of her husband and son and other things dear and sacred to her. She denied that she had ever left food on the table for her husband and son after their death, but that she set the table for the absent just as Queen Victoria used to do, she said. She told of words that she had had with Miss Hilda Lee Drew in which Capt. Hitchcock figured. She denied in toto all stories about visions and fortune tellers. She denied that she had said that before her reincarnation she had been Queen of Sheba. She said that she uses Dr. Hanish's Egyptian foodizer simply as a delicatessen. It has no religious significance to her. She said she never told anybody she was of a royal family but a man who was preparing a genealogical history of her family, the Mazdaznans, told her that he had traced her lineage back to kings and queens of nobility.

She testified that she never said that the "little master" came from a place where white men had never been. She admitted that she might have said that Dr. Hanish's knowledge was unlimited.

She said that she eats nothing that has to be killed but what grows in the face of the beautiful sun. She also eats eggs and milk.

The air bath, she said, had no religious significance, simply a matter of convenience.

Never told anybody that Dr. Hanish said there was going to be a great financial depression or that he advised her how to spend her money or what to do with her property.

She told anybody that Dr. Hanish told her the banks of England or that kings and queens consulted him.

Hanish Picked Flowers

She said that Dr. Hanish told her he had picked flowers with Queen Victoria in her conservatory. She admitted she told the story that Dr. Hanish had been lost in a desert and that after he entered a cave, and went in, and in, and in, he found women there who were four hundred years old. She told that story, she said, as a joke.

She got rid of her house, she said, principally because she had been advised by her attorney and others to do so.

She said she never saw anything immoral or any display of person in connection with the Mazdaznan belief.

The feature of the forenoon's trial was the donning by Mrs. Shaw of one of the garments that had been described as having angel's wings that gave vibration. She called it her new dress. It was a loose wrapper of light cloth with short flowing sleeves. She donned another made along the same lines but more elegant and with more colors. Asked as to other robes and wrappers she said that they were in her trunk that had been sent to Montreal.

She said that there is no religious significance on her part attached to the gowns.

Relative to a statement made by Hawthorne Drew that he had seen her about the house in a union suit she said that was true but that he came upon her unawares while she was doing her chamber work upstairs.

It was evident that the strain was beginning to tell on Mrs. Shaw but she answered all question in a firm voice and without hesitation. When the proceedings were resumed today Mrs. Shaw was recalled.

Mrs. Shaw's Denial

She began by denying that she ever told anybody she would get the same position in the proposed temple in Montreal as Mrs. Hilda occupies in the temple at Lowell.

Mrs. Shaw said she was interested in Christian science, that she had read one of Mother Eddy's books but was not a pupil. She said she had been a student of theosophy.

"Did you ever say that sometime you would reign as a queen?" asked Lawyer Wilson.

"No."

"Did you say that Mr. Shaw and Maxwell, your son, were not on the same plane with you?"

"No."

"Did you ever say that Mr. Shaw or Maxwell belonged to the ape or monkey family?"

"No."

"Did you tell anybody that you left food on the table for Mr. Shaw and Maxwell?"

"No. I always set the table just as if they were there. I set the table for absent as Queen Victoria used to."

There had been considerable said about Mrs. Shaw believing in fortune telling. She denied this. Said she had gone once to a fortune teller with Hilda Lee Drew just for the fun of it.

There was a Mrs. Lovering, she said, who visited at the Shaw house who used to tell fortunes from tea cups for the education of her husband and son. She said that Mrs. Lovering never pretended to give her any message from her husband.

She said she never made any attempt to turn her property and securities into money.

"Did you ever have any conversation with anybody about Dr. Hanish being the Christ?"

"No."

"Do you believe him to be Christ?"

"No."

"Did you ever say to anybody that poor people have no brains?"

"No."

"Did you ever roll in the dew?"

"Often when a child."

"Did you ever take a dew bath at the time spoken of by Mrs. Dutton?"

"I took one dew bath; it might have been at that time. I took it on my own premises."

"Why did you take the dew bath?"

"Because I wanted to take a cold bath and preferred the dew bath to the tub."

"Were you nude?"

"I never take a bath except I am nude."

Took Captain's Part

Mrs. Shaw related the story which she had with Capt. Hitchcock and in which Hilda Lee Drew took the part of the captain. Mrs. Shaw said she spoke to Captain Hitchcock about a business matter, about some stocks he was handling for her and that Miss Drew said to witness "You're insulting."

"I told her that it was none of her affairs and she repeated that I was insulting. She told me," said the witness, "that Capt. Hitchcock was the best friend I had in the world. I told her perhaps she might think so."

Mrs. Shaw told of words she had had with Dr. Drew and said that she (Mrs. Shaw) was "the maddest woman I ever saw."

Cross-examined by Lawyer Kittredge, Mrs. Shaw said she did not bring all her robes along because she didn't think it necessary and also because they were packed in her trunk and had been sent to Montreal.

Up to this time Mrs. Shaw had disclosed but one robe but now she produced another more elaborate than the first. This, however, she did not put on.

"You knew Capt. Hitchcock for a number of years?"

"No, sir."

"He was a very good friend of yours?"

"In pretension."

"He had attended meetings at the temple?"

"Yes."

"You have settled all your business with him?"

"My attorney has."

In the process of bringing out the transaction between Mrs. Shaw and Capt. Hitchcock and the nature of the settlement Mr. Wilson objected to the severity of Mr. Kittredge's examination, explaining that Mrs. Shaw had been on the stand for days and he had the examination was cruel, severe and unwarranted.

In view of those words the court asked Mrs. Shaw if she wished for a chair and she replied: "No indeed."

"Did you ever address a letter to Capt. Hitchcock, which you signed yourself 'Mother Shaw'?"

"I might. I frequently do sign my letters that way."

"Had that any religious significance in connection with the Mazdaznan sentiment of 'Peace, peace, peace in abundance'?"

"None whatever."

She Loaned Piano

Lawyer Kittredge questioned witness about the sale of personal property at the house.

"Why didn't you sell the curtains?"

"Because they were too good to let go for the price offered."

"Didn't you give them to the Mazdaznan temple?"

"No."

"Where are they now?"

"They are in Montreal in my trunk."

"Did you give a piano to the Mazdaznan temple?"

"No. I only stored it there."

"How long has it been stored there?"

"Since one week before the temple was dedicated."

"Did you give the Mazdaznans any money before your husband's death?"

"No. I made offerings. These offerings referred to were contributions of 25 and 50 cents."

"About your trip to California, did not Ruth Hilton accompany you?"

"Yes."

"How long were you gone?"

"From April 6 to the middle of July."

"Was Dr. Hanish there?"

"Yes, he was there before we got there and remained after we left."

"Did you pay Ruth Hilton's expenses?"

"Part of them."

"Did you pay all of her expenses?"

"I decline to answer that question."

"Did you loan money to Mrs. Hilton?"

"No."

"Did you loan money to Dr. Hilton?"

"Yes, $500."

"Did he pay it back?"

"No."

"Did you loan money to other members of the Mazdaznan cult?"

"Yes. I loaned $100 each to Miss Noble, Miss Lovering, Mrs. Morse and Mr. Meyers."

"Do you think that Mrs. Dutton owes you anything?"

"Yes, $300."

"Do you expect that she will pay you?"

"No, because she has nothing to pay it with."

"What title was Mrs. Hilton known in the temple?"

"None that I know of."

Mazdaznan Circular

Mr. Kittredge then presented a Mazdaznan circular to the witness which referred to physical culture classes and was signed "Classes now opened at Mazdaznan Temple, Spenta Maria, 54 Columbus avenue, M. E. Hilton, Kalamazoo."

"What does Kalamazoo mean?" asked Mr. Kittredge.

"I do not know."

"Then that's one they have on you?"

"I guess so."

"Who asked you to get rid of your lawyer?"

"The dear little fortune teller," said Mrs. Shaw with a smile.

"Do you know where Hanish came from?"

"No, and I don't care."

"You didn't make any inquiry into his antecedents?"

"No. It is what a man is today and not yesterday."

"You believe that what a man is today does not influence him tomorrow?"

"I did not know that there was a tomorrow."

Called in Rebuttal

Wilbur S. Dutton called in rebuttal said that Frank George had said in the presence of witness and others that he (George) was in Worcester that he (Frank) would do most anything for Aunt Nell for $2000. This statement was made when the action was entered for the appointment of a conservator to prevent Mrs. Shaw from disposing of the estate.

Hilda Lee Drew was called and corroborated a statement relative to Perley George having stayed over night because she said that she had trouble with Aunt Nell and that Aunt Nell was acting crazily.

Mrs. Hilton arrived at the court house shortly before one o'clock. At one o'clock the hearing was adjourned and will be resumed in Lowell.

Prior to the hearing, Tuesday morning Judge McIntire and counsel for both sides will visit the temple Spenta Maria and also the Shaw residence in this city.

Battle Royal Over Election of Executive Committee This Afternoon—The Treasurer's Report Shows Substantial Balance

The second day's session of the Police Relief association, in Lincoln hall, opened at 10:30 o'clock this morning and judging from the sounds of animated discussion that were wafted from the floor above there was something interesting doing. The old board of officers was re-elected with the exception of the executive board and a battle royal is on at this afternoon's session over the balloting for members of the executive board.

The executive board consists of seven members and the candidates for the seven places as named by the nominating committee are as follows: J. J. Sullivan, Lawrence; T. M. McKenny, Lynn; P. H. Doherty, Fall River; James Cash Taunton, Thomas; McMurphy, Worcester; Charles H. Flaherty, Fitchburg; Charles W. Wright, Springfield; Charles W. Allen, Somerville; Patrick J. Lehan, Salem; Edward M. Woods, Metropolitan Park police; Michael McDermott, Fall River; Matthew J. McCann, Lowell; James A. Maher, Malden; James A. McQuade, Lowell; Daniel P. Sweeney, New Bedford; 15 candidates for 7 places.

The report of the treasurer showed $2500 in the treasury while the auditing committee reported the books all right.

A tax committee placed the per capita tax for the coming year at $1.00. The matter of assisting town police in getting one day off in 30 was discussed and it was finally voted to so assist the town brethren.

All other reports including that of the executive committee were referred to the executive board with full powers.

Adjournment was taken from one o'clock till two and the afternoon session opened with balloting for the executive board.

Before the session opened this morning the delegates enjoyed a trolley ride through the city.

STRIKE IS SETTLED

Great Excitement Caused by Italian Raid on Ballot Box

Manufacturers to Frame Contracts to Ensure Industrial Peace—Six Mass Meetings in Progress in as Many Languages in Front of Lasters' Hall

LYNN, Oct. 15.—The lasters, whose strike in this city began two weeks ago and resulted in a practical tie-up of the shoe industry of this city, throwing out of employment about 15,000 men, met again in Lasters' hall today, this time to formally ratify by ballot the voice of yesterday to accept the agreements of the Manufacturers Association and the Joseph Caunt Co. whereby they return to work under the conditions in effect before the dispute arose. In the case of the Caunt Co.'s agreement the lasters return to work under the former conditions only temporarily, provision being made in the separate offer of that firm for the submission of conditions in that factory to an arbitration committee. The agreement, however, concedes all of the important demands of the union, the Caunt firm pledging itself to discontinue the employment of a score of union men hitherto employed in the work precipitated the strike.

While the balloting was in progress at Lasters' hall under the Australian system a crowd of Italian operatives, who are alleged to be anarchists, entered the hall and after a brief conference in the rear of the room rushed across the hall to the platform where they smashed the ballot box and threw the ballots out of the window. Up to that time about 400 votes had been cast.

The Italians refused to allow the balloting to continue until acquiescence had been made to the demands they then presented. They demanded that agents of the unions should secure the signature of every manufacturer in the city to the manufacturer's agreement. They were assured that practically every manufacturer was willing to reinstate the strikers and that the factory doors would be open to them whenever they wished to return. The Italians, however, demanded that the manufacturers should sign guarantees to that effect. They also demanded that all differences existing before the strike should be adjusted satisfactorily before the unions should vote on the question of returning to work.

The union in charge of the balloting sent for the police while the agents of the unions hunted up the members of the executive committee to decide what should be done. The balloting began at nine o'clock and up to the Italian invasion had proceeded peaceably and orderly.

Pending the result of the vote the strikers were held up temporarily, as was the conference of the union agents and the officials of the Caunt Co.

It was expected by the union that the results of today's balloting would sustain yesterday's vote by a proportion of three or four to one. It was realized, however, that the anti-settlement faction of the strikers had sufficient time to muster all its forces and would show much greater strength than at yesterday's meeting.

During the forenoon no less than six mass meetings conducted in as many different languages were in progress in the street in front of Lasters' hall and it was from one of those mass meetings that the belligerent Italian strikers proceeded on their raid of the ballot box. Among the different nationalities represented at these meetings were Swedes, Poles, Lithuanians, Greeks, Armenians, Russians and Italians.

The manufacturers today began to arrange a plan by which industrial peace in the shoe industry in this city may be established and perpetuated.

Are Assured of a Hearty Welcome by Japanese

TOKIO, Oct. 15.—All Japan is astir in anticipation of the arrival of the American Atlantic fleet. Yokohama and Tokio in particular are given over to enthusiastic preparations. All the Japanese newspapers of prominence are printing editions in English with lengthy editorials, assuring the American officers and sailors of a hearty welcome by the nation.

Every available vessel in the harbor of Yokohama has been chartered to convey excursionists to meet the warships on their approach.

A considerable fleet will venture far out at sea in order to extend the first welcome.

The navy department has issued maps showing the manner in which the battleships will be anchored. Each vessel is assigned to a buoy.

The American ambassador and his staff will meet the fleet aboard a special steamer and the members of the American commission to the Japanese exposition will have another. A third vessel has been chartered by the delegation of Pacific coast business men which arrived here several days ago. The American-Asiatic society will be represented by many of its members who have arranged for a large steamer elaborately decorated.

MEN WERE RESCUED

German Balloon Came Down in the North Sea

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The German balloon Busley came down yesterday morning at five o'clock in the North Sea. The two men on board were rescued by a passing steamer.

This news was received in a telegram and caused the greatest relief. The Busley is one of the balloons that started in the balloon race last Saturday from Berlin, now all the contestants are accounted for. There are still, however, two balloons missing. These started Monday in the endurance test.

The dispatch received by the Aero club says that the Busley early yesterday morning got into communication with a cozier bound for Edinburgh at a point in the North Sea to the northwest of Heligoland. The steamer signalled that she would stand by. The aeronauts then opened their safety valve with the idea of bringing the balloon down. In the meantime the steamer had launched a small boat to pick the two men up. The balloon fell to the sea but it was driven by a strong wind away from the steamer. The men in the boat pulled their hard-earned and finally managed to get a line fast to the car. They were being dragged amid the clouds of spray over the tops of the waves. They hung on until the two aeronauts had been rescued. The transfer of the balloonists to the small boat was attended with the greatest difficulty. As the connecting line was cut and the balloon went careening away over the sea,

SQUARE TIED UP

By Merrimack St. Sewer
Job Started Yesterday

Owen Tighe and a husky bunch of sewer employees, descended upon Merrimack square yesterday morning, and in an hour had the Boston & Northern and general traffic as well, turned topsyturvy.

The sewer employees have started in on the Merrimack street sewer, which will extend to John street and which will take five or six weeks. Supt. Morse has contracted for the installation of a trolley system that will fill in the earth so rapidly that not more than 50 feet of excavation will be in evidence at any time.

Meanwhile street car passengers on all lines will find it necessary to change at Merrimack and Central streets, the temporary terminal point. Cars from Pawtucketville come in and are sent back by the shifting of their trolleys. The same is true with Broadway and Highlands cars.

Cars from Westford, Chelmsford, Middlesex and Lawrence streets are operated to the head of Central street, and then turned back without entering Merrimack street. Dracut Centre cars are operated through Prescott street to Boston, returning, the cars run through Prescott street to Dracut Centre. The Christian Hill line has Merrimack Square and Christian Hill as its starting and finishing points.

GETS ALIMONY

MRS. GODFREY WINS SUIT
AGAINST HER HUSBAND

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Judge Richardson, in the superior court, yesterday granted Mrs. Beatrice B. Godfrey's application for alimony from her husband Arthur W. Godfrey, son of the millionaire lumber dealer, pending the outcome of the cross-bills for divorce between them. She was allowed $30 a week.

In the morning session Mrs. Godfrey testified as to her relations with John H. McCarthy, named as a co-respondent in her husband's suit for divorce, from the 1st of April, when her husband refused to pay her bills at the Hotel Tulleries, until midsummer, when she went abroad and lived at the Hotel Cecil, London, on money borrowed from McCarthy.

At the afternoon session McCarthy was the principal witness. He was examined and cross-examined as to his financial relations with Mrs. Godfrey, but was unable to give an exact account of what money he had loaned her, as he kept track of them only in his head.

Mrs. Godfrey is a pretty blonde of 21, and generally accompanied her answers to the questions of counsel with a pleasing smile.

HUNTING IN AUTO HOWARD GOULD

L. H. Morse Had a Novel Hunting Trip
Says That His Income Has Increased $200,000 a Year

L. H. MORSE AND H. J. TUMEJ ON THEIR RETURN FROM MAINE WOODS.

Rode From Lowell to Wilds of Maine and Returned in His Machine Bringing Back a Fine Deer

L. H. Morse is a man of new ideas, not only in the shoe business, but otherwise, and he exemplified a new idea in the sporting line yesterday, when fired but happy he rode into town with his companion H. J. Tumej in his auto, having come all the way from Portland, Me., during the day over the road.

The dust-covered auto as it came into Merrimack square, attracted considerable attention, but when the dealers of the square got a look at the rear of the car, they began to crowd around in open-mouthed wonderment for security strapped to the rear of the machine was a fine big deer which Mr. Morse had shot in the Maine woods and which is now on exhibition in Fairburn's market preparatory to being cut up.

Messrs. Morse and Tumej left Lowell two weeks ago and proceeded to Portland, Me., where they met Mr. Tumej's two uncles and then they proceeded to Calais, Me., where they took on Horace Glidden, a noted guide, and with five in the auto which has seats only for four they proceeded through a wild country into the woods. In their journey through the woods it was often necessary to stop and build corduroy roads for the auto before they could proceed. Then they spread tents on Tomah lake and later along the stream, and started in to hunt. The gross receipts of their hunting were two deer and 12 partridges. They consumed one of the deer at camp and brought the other back to Lowell. They saw a big cow mouse quite near the camp but of course dared not shoot her as the law was not off until today. The following of the animal woke them all up one night and until they found out what the trouble was had them scared for a moment.

THE UNEMPLOYED FLYING MACHINE

Almost Started Riots
in Sheffield

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The recent demonstrations by the unemployed brought one result today rather out of the ordinary. This was the issuing of a writ against William J. Thorne, social democrat member of parliament from the southern division of West-ham for inciting to a breach of the peace by making a speech in which he advised the unemployed to "rush" the baker shops rather than starve. A body of the unemployed is marching today from Nottingham to London. Serious riots were avoided in Sheffield yesterday when the mayor announced that the sum of $500,000 would be devoted to relief work. There have been demonstrations of the unemployed also at Sunderland and Maidstone.

FIRE IN POCKET

Man Discovered His
Danger in Time

A man who was accompanying Mr. Thomas Holtschmidt in a carriage going over Pawtucket bridge early this afternoon had a narrow escape from a severe burning. He had placed in his pocket a lighted pipe, which he had been smoking, and the clothing took fire. A hole was burned through the coat pocket when Mr. Holtschmidt discovered the blaze and extinguished the same.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—That Howard Gould's income was formerly $600,000 a year, but since the business depression of last year it has been reduced to $400,000 and that he has lost three hundred thousand dollars this year, was stated by his counsel in an argument before Justice Bischoff today. These figures were given in opposing an application by Mrs. Katherine C. Gould, wife of Howard Gould, who is suing him for divorce for an increase in her alimony from $25,000 a year to $120,000. Mrs. Gould asserted that her husband's income was $600,000 a year. Delancey Nicoll, counsel for Mr. Gould, replied that while this was once true, Mr. Gould says it is not so now.

Mr. Nicoll also asserted that Mrs. Gould's career for many years has been one of unbridled extravagance and that last year she received from her husband $224,000.

Counsel for Mr. Gould declared that in 1906 Mr. Gould told his wife that he would separate from her unless she abandoned her habits, but that Mrs. Gould declined to do so.

Clarence Shearn, counsel for Mrs. Gould, said that Mr. Gould had tried to starve his wife out of estate Gould and had filled the house with spies who watched her every movement, compelling her to move to a hotel.

Mr. Nicoll retorted that in seven years Mr. Gould gave his wife $766,500 and that Mrs. Gould had saved $200,000 of it.

Decision on the increase of alimony was reserved.

STUDENTS POISONED

As Result of Eating Canned
Corn, it is Alleged

CLINTON, Oct. 15.—About fourteen students and several of the teachers of South Lancaster academy at South Lancaster are suffering from ptomaine poisoning believed to have resulted from eating some canned corn which was used in the preparation of dinner served in the dining room of the academy dormitory yesterday noon. It is believed that none of the persons affected is in a dangerous condition. The first student to show symptoms of sickness became violently ill late last evening and from then till morning practically all the doctors in Lancaster and Clinton were kept busy attending the sufferers. Today fifteen were still so sick as to remain under a doctor's care and the remainder were in such a condition that no sessions of school were held.

The trustees, with the aid of three physicians, immediately began an investigation and traced the trouble to the canned corn. The academy, which is under the auspices of the Adventist denomination, is attended by students, both boys and girls from all parts of the east.

COUNTERFEITERS

Said to Be Circulating
Bad Money

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Months of search for a group of counterfeiters who are alleged to have been flooding the country with spurious 10 and 25 cent pieces was rewarded today by the discovery of the counterfeit plant in a tenement on the east side of this city. Secret service agents described it as a thoroughly equipped plant. The clue to the raid was furnished by the arrest of two men in Newark, N. J., last night.

MATRIMONIAL.

George Linahan of Lowell acted as best man at the wedding of his brother Benjamin Linahan of the Bradford district, Haverhill, and Miss Helen G. McCarthy of Lawrence. The contracting parties are well-known in Lowell. The marriage took place Monday afternoon in St. Mary's church, Lawrence, Rev. John B. Leonard, O. S. A., solemnizing the nuptial rites. Miss Viola McCarthy attended the bride. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, 29 Lowell street, Lawrence, and a large number of friends gathered to extend their well wishes to the couple and to see them safely on their wedding tour.

The bride was graduated with the class of 1902, L. H. S., and for the past few years has been in the employ of the Emerson Loom Harness company. She was very popular among her friends, as the large number of beautiful and useful presents given her evidenced.

Monday he was pleasantly surprised with a purse of $50, a gift from the office of the Haverhill Boxboard company; a dinner and dining room set from the employees of the company; and an oak Morris chair from the employees of the shipping department.

Immediately after the reception the couple started on their wedding tour, which they will spend at Niagara Falls and New York City.

LATEST LABOR MEASURES

To be Fought for in Legislature Next Year

Holyoke Will Have Next Convention — Phippi H. Sweet Unanimously Elected President — D. D. Driscoll Elected Secretary and Treasurer — Resolution Against Compulsory Vaccination

The 23d annual convention of the Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor which opened in Associate hall Monday morning came to a close this afternoon.

This morning was spent in clearing up minor matters and unfinished business.

Shortly after the opening of the convention the announcement was made of the death of Jeremiah F. Mahoney of Springfield C. L. U. who was a delegate to the convention and was taken ill with acute pneumonia. He died last night at St. John's hospital. It was voted to draw up a set of resolutions and a committee was appointed to accompany the body to Springfield. The committee consists of the following: President Phippi H. Sweet, John W. Kerwin, Anna T. Bowen and Paul T. Pappold.

There was a lively contest on the election to the legislative committee and it was necessary to take four ballots before John Weaver Sherman, of the Newspaper Writers' Union, of Boston, won out, having 78 votes to 45 cast for Thomas M. Nolan of Boston.

The reports of the executive committee and the finance committee were read and accepted.

The following resolutions reported by the legislative committee were read and adopted:

The enactment of a law that will provide for the relief of obnoxious conditions in the congested tenement house districts.

"Weekly payment law" for weekly payment of wages for all employees engaged in the various branches of industry in Massachusetts.

That a committee be appointed to investigate civil service laws of the state and present such amendments as may be necessary.

A bill to provide for the fixing of compensation of city and town employees.

To urge upon the next general court the repeal of an un-American law relative to seamen leaving their vessel before the expiration of their contract.

To have such laws passed as will compel state, city and town officials to have labor conditions inserted in all contracts.

William E. Sproule, president of Street Carriers' union, of Lowell, introduced the following resolution:

"Believing that compulsory vaccination, as imposed upon the children of this commonwealth, is an injustice to the child, and knowing from facts that many children have been maimed for life through its evil effects; be it resolved: That organized labor go on record as being opposed to compulsory vaccination."

The resolution was adopted and it was voted to send a circular to every labor union in the state affiliated with the A. F. of L. in order that they may go on record.

The convention adopted a resolution thanking the mayor of this city, the local labor unions and their committees, Humphrey O'Sullivan and the press for the treatment accorded the delegates during their stay in this city.

This afternoon the delegates marched in a body to the funeral parlors of Undertaker James F. O'Donnell & Sons in Market street and after viewing the body of Delegate Mahoney, who died at St. John's hospital last night, escorted the remains to the Middlesex street station.

Robert S. Mahoney of the Typographical union of Lawrence, also president of the Central Labor Union of the down river city, was the recipient of congratulations from the delegates this morning who it was learned that he had been appointed New England organizer by the International Typographical Union.

Yesterday afternoon

Before the close of yesterday's session of the American Federation of Labor state convention, the following action was taken:

At the suggestion of the legislative committee it was decided to make the main fight of organized labor at the state house next year for the following measures:

Eight-hour law, one which will be absolutely effective.

Peaceful picketing and anti-injunction bill.

Employers' liability and workmen's compensation bill.

Direct legislation, through initiative and referendum and the right of recall.

Other legislation approved by resolutions adopted call for the pensioning of aged and infirm employees of municipalities and towns; providing for the election of all street commissioners by the people at the polls; an old-age pension law; the passage of a bill to license working hours for harborers, and legislation prohibiting women from serving liquor in hotels, saloons and other licensed places.

Frank H. McCarthy, delegate to the national convention of A. F. of L., was instructed by a resolution which says in part:

"The only logical escape from government by injunction and political corruption is by obtaining a government by the people by direct legislation through the initiative and referendum."

"Direct legislation has been a part of the legislative demands of the A. F. of L. and nearly all its subordinate branches for nearly 30 years."

That our delegate be requested to urge upon the A. F. of L. the passage of a resolution instructing all legislative committees of that body and bodies subordinate thereto, to include the initiative and referendum in all demands on legislative bodies and parties.

"That no child under 16 years of age should be employed for more than five hours in any one day, and then only when attending school a part of the remainder of the day."

Holyoke won next year's convention by a majority of 37 votes over Worcester.

Phippi H. Sweet of Boston, co-opted president, was unanimously re-elected president. D. D. Driscoll of Boston was unanimously re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Thomas J. Durnin, bartender's union St. Thomas, James W. Wall, painters' union, Worcester, and William J. Smith, cigarmakers' union No. 25, North Adams, were unanimously elected first, second and third vice presidents.

Michael D. Collins of the Cambridge C. L. U. won the fourth vice presidency on the first ballot. It required two ballots to decide the contest for the fifth vice presidency, and Frank M. Bump of Brockton, boot and shoe workers' union No. 1, won.

Frank H. McCarthy of Boston cigarmakers' union won the delegateship to the A. F. of L. by a big majority.

James R. Crozier of Boston carriage and wagon workers' union No. 3, and Edward F. Ward of Boston brewery workers' union No. 2, were re-elected on the legislative committee, and George E. Curran of Boston theatrical stage employees' union, and Edward F. Connelly of Boston lampmakers' union, were elected as new members.

THE SUN'S BULLETIN SERVICE

The world's championship series of baseball games came to a end yesterday and with its ending The Sun finished a stunt that would do credit to any metropolitan newspaper in the country.

From the first game to the last The Sun daily megaphoned and bulletined each play made in all five games and an extra appeared on the street 15 minutes after the close of the game with the whole story including the box score.

That the public appreciated The Sun's efforts was apparent by the large crowds that gathered before The Sun building to hear the returns as they were partly seen by the photograph shown above though as it was impossible to take a good picture showing both sides of the street, the crowd which lined the sidewalk opposite the building is not in the picture.

On Sunday last, perhaps The Sun did the best of all; for it bulletined the score by innings and was undoubtedly the only paper in New England to do so on that day, for even the Boston papers failed to put out the score on Sunday until evening when the regular Associated Press opened. But The Sun through the courtesy of the local office of the Postal Telegraph company and the Chicago News, succeeded in getting the score by innings as the game was played and had it bulletined in front of The Sun building.

The Sun was perhaps the only newspaper east of New York to give the full box score of the game in its baseball extra.

In this matter as in all others The Sun as usual outdistanced its competitors.

FIRE IN SCHOOL

Exciting Situation at Chelmsford Centre

A fire broke out in the basement of the Chelmsford Centre school yesterday while 235 pupils were attending the session, but through the fine presence of mind of the teachers and the perfect discipline maintained the school rooms were cleared in a few moments and there were no casualties.

The fire was discovered by James Dillard, a pupil in Miss Campbell's room who found a blaze in a box of sawdust in the basement. The boy immediately notified Miss Campbell and then Principal Rice who promptly sounded the fire signal.

Miss Campbell kept her pupils in the room until the gong sounded and then marched them out in perfect order. In Miss Godfrey's room and in the corridor the smoke was dense but Miss Godfrey's pupils were also marched out in good order.

A fire drill had been given earlier in the morning and Principal Rice had expressed himself as not satisfied with it. When the second alarm rang many of the children thought it a second test and hustled out with smiling faces, not realizing their proximity to danger. The fire was extinguished by means of chemical fire extinguishers and the damage was slight. An investigation into the cause of the fire is being made.

LIVELY BATTLE

Was Fought on Boston "Curb" Yesterday

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Scenes of the wildest confusion marked the most riotous day the Boston curb market has ever experienced yesterday.

A most persistent raid was made on Thomas W. Lawson's pet stock, Bay State Gas, and a fierce battle was waged throughout the day for the supremacy.

The curb brokers are awaiting with breathless interest for the opening today, for it is believed the battle is not yet over and is apt to be waged with even greater bitterness from the opening hour than yesterday.

Over 300,000 shares of Bay State Gas were dealt in during the day.

Exchange place never before presented such a wild scene, almost bordering on pandemonium. From the opening of the market to the close, the street was packed with "buyers and sellers" who shouted, themselves hoarse and ran about like mad.

In the meantime emissaries were scouting the city for Lawson himself to warn him of his danger. While the battle was at its height, in the street, a big red auto containing Lawson swung into Exchange place.

A wild cheer went up from many throats, intermingled with jeers and cat-calls from others. But Lawson paid no attention to either. He jumped quickly out of his car, the moment he touched the sidewalk, and with tense face walked rapidly into the committee room of the exchange.

From then until closing time it was a wild scramble. While one faction was selling Bay State Gas at $1, the Lawson brokers were paying $1.40 for it. It was a bitter struggle the last five minutes, and both sides were anxious to have the market close at their figure. At closing time the stock was selling at $1.15.

BALKAN TROUBLE

Great Britain, Russia and France Reach Agreement

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Great Britain, Russia and France have reached an agreement on a program to be submitted to the other powers as a basis for the discussion of the proposed European conference to settle the Balkan situation. The proposals to be laid before the powers are eight in number.

In the agreement new clauses will settle the dispute in regard to the Oriental railway. The second and third proposals are that the powers shall recognize the annexation by Austria of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the return of the Sanjak of Novi Pazar to Turkey.

Another article replaces article 23 of the treaty of Berlin by clauses recognizing the annexation of Crete to Greece and determining the financial obligations of Crete toward Turkey.

It is understood that the four powers under whose protection Crete has been—Russia, Great Britain, France and Italy—will settle the Cretan question in concert with Turkey before referring it to the conference.

It is proposed also that the second part of article 23 of the Berlin treaty which provides special regulations for the government of other parts of European Turkey shall cease to have force when the powers are assured that a satisfactory settlement has been effected.

Another proposal is that the arrangements similar to the above shall apply to the Armenian provinces of Turkey.

The sixth article deals with Montenegro. The Montenegrins of sovereignty are limited by article 23 of the treaty of Berlin. It is proposed that articles 23 to 33 inclusive of the Berlin treaty shall be condensed to a single article abrogating all the restrictions imposed by the treaty under the original article 23 which it is proposed to sweep away.

STRUCK POLE

AUTO ACCIDENT IN MERRIMACK SQUARE TODAY

A Pope Hartford automobile, license number 12357, figured in a rather peculiar accident this morning in Merrimack square. The car came down Merrimack street at a medium rate of speed and it seems that while trying to turn into Bridge street, the lady, who was at the wheel, lost control of the steering apparatus and the machine skidded and struck the iron pole on Bridge street.

The auto contained three passengers and although not very badly shaken up, the car suffered a very bad fright. The lamp and the shield on the right side of the car were badly damaged while the front axle was sprung.

The car remained in the square until a few minor repairs were made on it, so that it could be brought to the garage.

The license number 12357, according to the Automobile License Record for the year of 1908 was given to Flora K. Kelley, 418 Cambridge street, Cambridge, Mass.

POLICE BANQUET

Visiting Delegates to Convention at Festive Board

FRANK K. STEARNS,
Chairman of Police Board, Who Acted
as Toastmaster.

SUPT. WM. B. MOFFATT,
Lowell Police Department.

Fine Menu and Many Speeches Touching Benefits of the Massachusetts Police Association

The delegates to the eighth annual convention of the Massachusetts Police association were tendered a banquet last night at the New American hotel. About 150 delegates and invited guests gathered around the festive board and after discussing an excellent menu listened to inspiring speeches.

Seated at the head tables were: Chairman Stearns of the police board and Commissioner Boulger. Supt. Moffatt, Deputy Welch and James A. McQuade of the department. Representative Charles F. Varnum, Supt. William E. Maloney of the Boston & Northern St. R. R., Rep. James E. O'Donnell, James O'Sullivan, Lawrence Cummings of the Boston Globe and E. J. Gallagher, editor of The Sun. The menu was very fine and the arrangements were perfect.

After the inner man had been satisfied James A. McQuade, chairman of the committee on arrangements, responded to a order and said: "We extend to you a hearty and generous welcome to our beautiful city. We hope that your stay with us will be an enjoyable and instructive one."

"At the last convention Patrolman Edward P. Flanagan was elected president of the association and I am sorry to say that he is not present tonight, but I am happy to state that he is convalescent and will soon be about. I hope and trust that you will feel that you can make yourself at home in Lowell. We have tried to provide for your amusement while here. Consequently we have invited several gentlemen here tonight who will be able to interest you on several topics."

"We have a man here tonight who at one time was a news gatherer but later entered into another business, but now he is close to the department. I have now, gentlemen, the unbounded pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Frank K. Stearns, chairman of the Lowell police board, who will also act as toastmaster."

Chairman Stearns, amid great applause, arose and spoke in part as follows: "Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates and members of the boys in blue, who form the department in Lowell and throughout the commonwealth of Massachusetts, I give you a most hearty and cordial welcome. I am exceedingly touched, my friends, by the introduction given me by my friend on my left (Chairman McQuade)."

"At the time that I was trying to gather news items for the papers he embarked in the police department. He figures up to the standard of a first-class police officer. I also flatter myself that I make a model chairman of a police board. I must qualify that a little, or my friend Boulger will chop off my head tomorrow."

Mr. Stearns then humorously related a story of a "model" husband "mode" found from the dictionary that "model" means a small imitation of the real thing.

"It is a felicitous pleasure at this time for me to introduce to you Deputy Superintendent Redmond Welch."

Mr. Welch spoke in part as follows: "I am going to say a few words to you as police officers. As I sat here this evening it would make the breast of each and every one of you swell with pride if you heard the pleasant remarks of the guests about the calibre and physique of the police officers present here this evening. Words of praise have been expressed on all sides."

"About five years ago it remained for a police officer of New Bedford to come here and explain to the police department of Lowell the matter which at the present time has reached noble proportions or what is known as the Massachusetts Police association. There is absolutely nothing secret in our organization. It is not to intrude upon the rights of anyone else but to protect our own and that is what the Massachusetts Police association represents."

"We have interested our citizens as well as the representatives of the general court and they have not been slow in seeing the necessity of the same and as a result of the preaching of our doctrine we have received some important benefits. Whatever benefits the police officer benefits the community. The association is still in its infancy, but we hope in the future to accomplish far greater results than have been accomplished thus far."

"Police officers are appreciative of what is being done for them. In my experience which covers a period of 20 odd years I have seen a change of attitude of the public towards the police officer. The citizen has become educated to the fact that a police officer is of great benefit to the community for without an efficient police force the community is not worth living in."

Charles H. Winslow

Charles H. Winslow, member of the Massachusetts commission of Industrial Education, was the next speaker and started off by telling a humorous story of how he assisted in the passage of the police pension bill while a member of the house of representatives.

"Germany and the other foreign countries far surpass the United States in the education of a boy when it comes to learning a trade," said the speaker. "This country offers absolutely nothing to a boy who has got to go out and learn a trade. You have of course heard people speak of the American boy being lazy. He is neither lazy nor arrogant. He is not educated, as he should be. The school system is right for boys who intend to go to college, not for the boys who have to go to work."

Mr. Winslow then went on to explain the education of boys to crafts. He said that if the state of Massachusetts were asked to expend $3,000,000 for the purpose of educating boys in crafts the dome of the state house would fall, but Ireland, a small country is spending $4,000,000 for industrial education. He said that Ireland is watching Germany, France, Belgium and has always watched England.

Referring to the police officers, the speaker said: "I am always at the command of the police officer and anything that I can do for them I am ready and willing to do. He saw the London 'holby' the gentlemen of France and the officers of other countries, but no place on the face of God's earth can you find a better disciplined department of police officers than you can find in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Henry T. Ryan of Haverhill

At this point Toastmaster Stearns paid a very touching tribute to President Edward Flanagan of the association who is confined at St. John's hospital suffering from typhoid fever. Mr. Stearns then introduced Henry T. Ryan of Haverhill, president of the Massachusetts Police association, who is acting as president in the absence of Mr. Flanagan.

Mr. Ryan, during the course of his remarks, said: "For the second time today I must express my sorrow to stand here tonight and take the place of a man who lies sick. I mean the man whose heart is with this association."

A number of years ago it was my ambition to bring together the police officers of the Merrimack Valley. We started out by playing ball and I can assure you that those games were as hot as any games played in the National league. Yes, we beat Lowell—and Lowell beat us."

He then told about a meeting held for the organization of the association for police officers throughout the state. He said that the association was formed for the uplifting of the police officers. At the meeting in question the speaker said there were but 30 men while today there are 1571 in the association.

The majority of men elected in our cities are not fit to be there. They have a police officer. They knock the police officer and are out to get revenge. One of our aldermen in Haverhill dodged a police officer's footsteps for one year because the officer had made the man move along the sidewalk before he was a city official."

Mr. Ryan spoke of the legislation favorable to police officers in this state and concluded by urging the police officers outside the association to join.

E. J. Gallagher

Edward J. Gallagher, editor of The Sun, responded for "The Press" and in his opening remarks he commended the objects of the Massachusetts police association particularly in regard to the insurance and pension features. There is a very general misapprehension, he said, of the application of the pension system, some people believing that when an officer completes twenty years' service he can claim a pension and enter some other business. This is a mistake. To get a pension at the expiration of twenty years' service an officer must either be disabled or have reached the age of sixty-five years. The pension system thus affords the city an equitable way of retiring officers at an age when their usefulness has passed. A man sixty-five years old is not adapted for the general work of a police department. Thus the pension system operates to improve the police department in every city in Massachusetts.

He then showed the important relations between the press and the police departments, and how much can be accomplished by co-operation in the detection of crime and the capture of criminals. He advocated candor between the press and the police, and said the press should especially respect the wishes of the probation officer and omit the publication of such names as he may request to be omitted. Some men and many women would rather serve a sentence in jail than have it published in the press that they were convicted of any crime and such publication may defeat all efforts at reform.

The newspapers should be lenient and charitable especially towards the women and children arrested and the police officers by observing the same rule could make the disgrace and humiliation of such unfortunate as light as possible.

He pointed out the revolution in the methods of chasing criminals starting with the patrolman, then the mounted officer, next the bicycle policeman and now the time has arrived when every well regulated department should have an automobile to pursue criminals who may use that means of escape.

The time may come he said with the development of the airship when some member of the police board will recommend the purchase of a flying machine to pursue the criminals to the clouds.

The speaker pointed out the great many outlets from the city and the ease with which criminals can escape as compared with former times. In this relation he told of how much assistance the electric car conductors can give to the police when they read the accounts of crime and description of the criminals in the press. He instanced the fact that a car conductor caught two of the Woburn yegmen at Arlington and turned them over to the police.

In conclusion he pointed out the lack of proper police protection in many country towns and the stupid delay in notifying neighboring cities or even the state police when serious crimes are discovered. There was an illustration of this, he said, in the recent Methuen tragedy and also in the murder of Miss Mullins at Arlington. In both cases the town officers bungled until the culprits had time to escape or else to destroy all evidence connecting them with the murders. He said there should be a law compelling the police of every town to notify the police of the neighboring city at the earliest possible moment after discovering a murder or any serious crime, and if necessary for assistance from the neighboring city as well as from the state police. The county, he believes, should pay whatever expenses might be incurred by a city in helping a neighboring town to capture criminals.

Supt. William B. Moffatt

Supt. William B. Moffatt, of the police department, was then called upon and he said: "Mr. Toastmaster and you gentlemen, who make and administer the laws of this state, I wish to say that on March 3, 1881, I was appointed a supernumerary officer in the Lowell police department. I do not see a great deal of change in the physical condition of the officers of today and that of 27 years ago. I believe, however, that the mental condition has improved very much. When I became a member of the force there were 62 members including supernumeraries. Today there are but 12 of those remaining all the rest having ceased to be members of our department, the greater majority having passed across the river."

"Today in Lowell we have 143 superior officers and members in the department and 11 employees. These improvements have been brought about by the great improvements in the scientific and industrial world. Science gave us the Bertillon system and later the finger print system. The Bertillon was not generally adopted excepting in the larger cities because of the expense. But it answered a great purpose and was the best known system for many years and aided these cities who had adopted it to apprehend criminals."

"When I was at the St. Louis exposition I met J. K. Farrier, a Scotland Yard detective, he having brought with him to this country the celebrated finger print system. It is very cheap to maintain and no city or town can afford to do without it. The whole outfit does not cost more than $10."

The superintendent then went on to explain the working of the system.

Continuing he said: "Lowell was the first department in the United States to adopt the finger print system. We went before the legislature and as a result a criminal bureau of investigation was established. He urged the representatives of visiting departments to take up the system without delay and told how it assisted in prosecuting a man after having been arrested for some crime."

Speaking along the lines of improvement and showing how much easier it was for a criminal to escape at the present time made mention of the fact that 27 years ago there were but six car lines running in this city, while today there are 16 and six of those lead to different cities and towns and that there was an excellent chance for a criminal to make his escape.

In conclusion he said: "You must not forget there is nothing that will bring promotion any better or faster than by doing your duty faithfully and then when the opportunity comes, you will be called to something better."

Letters of regret were received from Lieut. Gov. Draper, Roger G. Sullivan of Manchester, Tyler A. Stevens of the common council, Supt. Thomas Lees of the Boston & Northern; President Henry A. Smith of the board of trade, Secretary John A. McKenna of the board of trade, Senator Joseph A. Ribbard and Philip S. Marden, also a letter from Gov. Guild.

Rep. James E. O'Donnell

Representative James E. O'Donnell of this city spoke on "The Commonwealth." He said: "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is one of the oldest, most conservative and best governed states in this Union. It has been my pleasure to represent a certain district this year."

"You, gentlemen, are the guarantors of our peace, the protectors of our homes. When in our retirement at night you are looking always that harm will not befall us. I have found our policemen honest, faithful and courteous in their dealings. In conjunction with my colleagues we secured for you one day in thirty, a day of recreation."

"I think that the commonwealth is generous to its servants. All it asks of you is to do the tasks assigned you and do them well. Gentlemen, I thank you for this opportunity to meet you tonight and I wish you success in all your undertakings."

Lawrence Cummings was introduced as "The Man of the Hour." He said: "I have found in the police department as good friends as any man would want to find in a day's walk. I believe that if a police officer while in the performance of his duty is injured or killed he should be cared for if disabled and in case of his death his wife and family should be properly cared for. I have found as brave men in the police department as in other walks of life, and I believe that this association is of great benefit to the state. Mr. Cummings related many instances of heroic bravery shown by police officers."

Supt. Wm. E. Maloney

Supt. William E. Maloney, of the Boston & Northern, then spoke as follows:

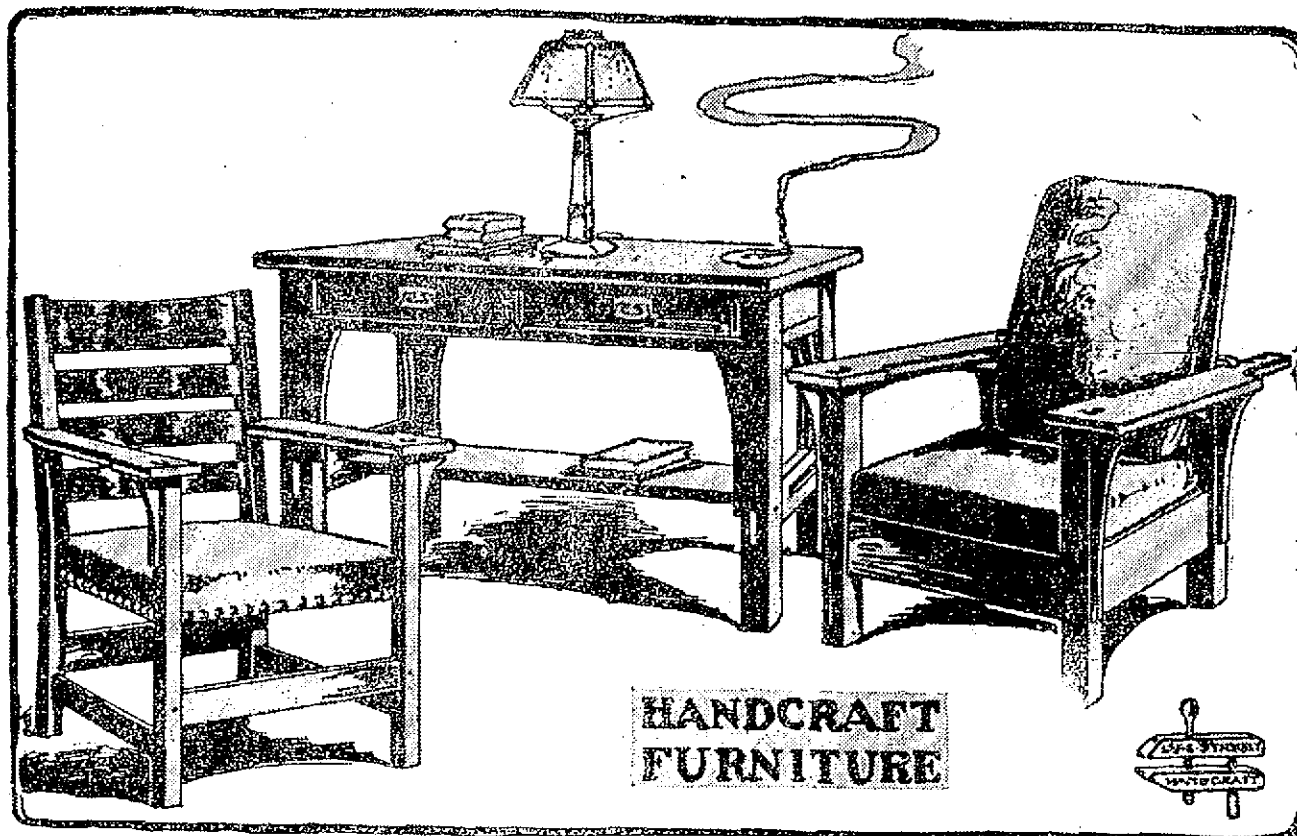

"First of all I wish to thank the invitation committee for the opportunity to be present at this gathering tonight. It is a pleasure indeed because I am a thorough believer in any organization or association of men which helps to further their interests, and better their conditions. I am a thorough believer in co-operation, which can be brought about only by a feeling of mutual interest, and the great problem of today is how to develop that interest. Your method strikes me as being better than that of any organization I have in mind. There never has been a time, I dare say, in the memory of anyone seated about this table tonight, when the minds of the people were so bewildered, so disturbed and depressed as at the present time. BIG LABOR RALLY

Stirring Addresses by Messrs.
Golden and McCarthy

JOHN GOLDEN.

Lowell a Badly Organized City —
Hours of Labor Longer and
Wages Lower Than in Most
Other Cities — Street Parade

The much heralded rally and parade of the American Federation of Labor which is now holding its state convention in Lowell, was held last night and proved an unqualified success.

At 7:30 o'clock the procession was formed on Merrimack street in front of the Soldiers' monument and headed by the Lowell National band. Richard Griffiths leader, marched over the route mentioned in yesterday's Sun. All trades and labor unions of Lowell were represented in the parade.

On reaching Associate hall, the scene of the rally, the assembly was called to order by Mr. Joseph Convery of Lowell, who in fitting words introduced the state president, Philip H. Sweet.

After the latter had stated the purpose of the rally he introduced Mr. John Golden of Fall River, the well-known president of the United Textile Workers of America.

John H. Golden's Address

Mr. Golden was given a rousing reception and among other things said: "I am indeed surprised when I become acquainted with the unorganized conditions in Lowell. Why is it? The employers of Lowell are the very same as the employers of other cities, and this causes us naturally to conclude that it is the employees and not the employers who are primarily responsible for the conditions which are found here. We come here tonight to suggest a way out of it."

"We hear the rumbling of unorganized labor, as well as organized labor. These rumblings are requests for privileges which are enjoyed by others. They are not special privileges, but fair and square requests,—requests which we must have one way or another." At this point the speaker discussed the injunction law at considerable length, and then launched into the necessity of organization, especially in this city. "I know," continued the speaker, "that many efforts have been made to rebuild textile organizations in your city, but such a move cannot be brought to a successful point unless the men and women workers of the city show some life and energy. I ask you men here tonight to get together in your different crafts and do something for yourselves. Compare your conditions with the conditions found in other similar cities of New England. In comparison, you will find that the people of other cities enjoy much better and fairer conditions."

During the recent depression we have found it very difficult to keep our organizations together, but we have succeeded, thanks to the healthy endeavor of those actively engaged in them.

"To bring about and realize our desires we must scrutinize the men who are looking for public office. Question them, and if they promise to support our cause—which is indeed a worthy one—we should look upon them as our friends, but if they don't, we must look upon them as our enemies and do our utmost to defeat them. It behooves us to take a more active part in the elections and our slogan should always be 'Elect our friends and defeat our enemies.'"

F. H. McCarthy

The next speaker was the general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. F. H. McCarthy, who

JOHN ARBUCKLE

Will Try to Save
Cruiser

John Arbutuckle, the sugar refiner and noted philanthropist of New York, is to undertake the floating of the cruiser Yankee, which three weeks ago went ashore off Spindle rocks, at the entrance of Buzzards bay. He has entered into a contract for this purpose with Secretary Metcalf, the consideration being $57,500. Mr. Arbutuckle is required to expend up to $50,000 in the prosecution of the work, and if then his efforts are unsuccessful, and the attempt to float the ship has to be abandoned the government will pay him $25,000. Mr. Arbutuckle does not hope to make a profit out of the transaction, but is willing to risk his money with the hope of saving the ship. Compressed air will be used in the undertaking.

was warmly received. After entering into his address Mr. McCarthy said: "Lowell as a business center is known all over the country, but I must say that organized labor here is the weakest known in the country. Judging from the size of this evening's rally I must naturally conclude that the people here are too busy to attend to their own business."

"Lowell as an organized center has receded considerably during the past eight years, in fact it is the worst organized city in New England. What is the cause? It certainly cannot be contentment on the part of the masses, for the conditions here, as I know them, are not sufficient to warrant that. Neither do I believe it is despair. I want to call your attention to the fact that whatever the conditions of labor are in this locality, the working class is directly responsible for it. The working class is allowing the employer to establish a standard and they are not plucky enough to stand up and fight for better conditions."

Mr. McCarthy referred to the long work hours and smaller wages, saying: "Until the people of this section wake up and demand what is rightfully theirs, they will remain in the same old, discontented state. The hours of labor here are longer and the wages smaller, on an average, than any other city of New England. The cause for better conditions in other cities is the activity and personal interest shown by the laboring people. The employers of Lowell have the same Christian feeling in their hearts for their employees as the employers of other cities—that is, they won't pay any more or have their help work any less hours than labor forces upon them."

The speaker emphatically asserted that the laboring people should get their rights and added: "I would like to bring you laboring people of Lowell to a realization of what organization would mean to you, and I hope to witness, in the very near future, a change in organization, such as will convince me that the people of Lowell have fully awakened to what rights belong to them and get them. You can do it if you only concentrate your efforts towards that end."

The two last speakers who held the audience till its close, 10 o'clock, were Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts state branch of the American Federation of Labor, and William E. Steele, president of the Lowell Street Railway Men's union.

MAN'S DAUGHTER TRYING TO RAISE THE MONEY

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 15.—After having been confined in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul for ten months, Nicholas Tschakovsky, a member of the Russian revolutionist organization, is to be released by order of the Russian government. But N. Tschakovsky will be obliged to furnish $25,000 bail, pending his trial, the date for which has not yet been fixed.

As the decision of the government becomes effective immediately, Tschakovsky's daughter is now making an endeavor to raise the sum, but as cash bail is required and the amount is large, it may be several days before Tschakovsky leaves the fortress.

EMORY IS DYING

He Was Shot by His Companion

LYNN, Oct. 15.—Elwin S. Emory, the 13 year old son of M. Oscar Emory, of 62 Eastern avenue, is dying at the Lynn hospital as the result of being shot in the side by his companion, Horace Wiley, in a mysterious manner, late this afternoon. Young Wiley is 17 years old, and the son of Frank Wiley of Clowery street. The two boys, with others, had been hunting. According to Wiley, the 22 caliber Robert rifle, which he was carrying, accidentally went off, just how he does not know, and the bullet entered the Emory boy's side. The other boys, however, state that Wiley was illustrating a "hold-up," that he ordered Emory to hold up his hands, and taking a firing posture, accidentally or otherwise, pulled the trigger.

Emory was operated on late last night but the doctors say there is no hope of his recovery.

Young Wiley was taken into custody by the police.

Kidney disease advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before he comes to its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dull pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells or a tired worn-out feeling, or if the urine is dark, foul-smelling, irregular and attended with pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this statement of this Lowell citizen: B. Delany, living at 1540 Middlesex street, Lowell, Mass., says: "I do not hesitate one moment in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills as I have found them very beneficial. For some time I was troubled with a lameness in the small of my back. It was hard for me to get up after I had been sitting for some time and just as difficult for me to straighten after sleeping. The several remedies I used gave me no relief, and I was finally induced to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, having heard so much about them. I procured them from Ellingwood & Co.'s drug store, and they gave me more relief than anything I had previously used. My back is now strong and the lameness has disappeared."

BRYAN PLEASED

At Reception in His Own State

HEBRON, Neb., Oct. 15.—The second day's tour of Nebraska by William J. Bryan closed at Hebron last night. Twenty-two speeches were made during the day by the democratic candidate, varying in duration from ten minutes to one hour. The crowds which greeted him at the various stations were composed largely of old friends of the candidate who had heard him many times as a stump speaker during the last 20 years. With the conclusion of yesterday's work Mr. Bryan expressed himself as greatly pleased with his reception in his home state, saying that his audiences were larger than during the other campaigns.

Three congressional districts were traversed yesterday, and in each one Mr. Bryan made an appeal for the democratic congressional nominee. He invariably began each speech by saying that he was more interested in the election of the candidate for congress than was the candidate himself. "I should feel mighty lonesome in Washington if both the senate and the house were against me," he said, "but if you will give me the house, I am sure we shall make the senate feel lonesome."

Aside from the guarantee of bank deposits he spoke to the farmers in regard to the panic, saying that there were more business failures during the first nine months of this year, than there were in the first nine months of 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896. He said that the republican party was not responsible for good crops or high prices, and quoted the prices of farm products in Canada and abroad in support of his contention.

In speaking of the president's "interfering with the election" in his Hebron speech, Mr. Bryan said: "I do not envy my opponent because he had so influential a backer. I would rather have my nomination than his, but we are the candidates before you. He is nominated on the theory that he is of my size, and I believe he is. He has been nominated on the theory that he was competent to conduct his own campaign, and I pay him a higher compliment when I presume that he is able to do so, than does the president when he assumes that he is not able to do so."

"I do not approve of the action of the president in using the prestige, the influence and the patronage of his office to dictate the nomination of the republican candidate. I do not approve of the action of the president in using the office that belongs to the people as if it were a party asset, for a part of the people. I ask no favor at his hand. All I ask is that he stand off and let Mr. Taft and I fight it out."

Mr. Bryan slept last night at Hebron. The state committee has assigned 18 speeches to him for tomorrow, but in all probability the "extras" will bring that number up to 25.

WIRE NETTING

To Protect Battleships From Torpedoes

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 15.—The ability of the new steel wire netting, now being tried out by the navy department to protect the sides of battleships against torpedoes, was said to be conclusively established by the test given it yesterday in Narragansett bay. The netting was submerged between two boats, five of the new "Mark 5" whitehead torpedoes, the fastest known, with a speed of 19 knots, were directed at the screen from the torpedo boat Morda, stationed between the two and 100 yards, but none was able to penetrate the screen.

AUTO WRECKED

After Taking Candidate Sherman to Cuba

BLANDFORD, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The automobile of that took James S. Sherman, from Blandford to Cuba yesterday afternoon, was wrecked and totally ruined here on the return trip to Blandford last night. The automobile belonged to Clyde J. Shellen, of Blandford, and while running at high speed, struck a calf lying in the highway and was dented. The gasoline tank flew up and the car at once took fire. Mr. Shellen was pinned under the burning car, but was rescued by his companion in the car ahead. His shoulder was crushed and he was otherwise severely injured.

GERMAN BALLOON

THE ONLY ONE NOT YET ACCOUNTED FOR

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Only one of the 23 balloons that started in the race for the international trophy on Sunday from Schmargendorf is unaccounted for. This is the German balloon Busley, under the command of Dr. Niemeyer, with Hans Hiedmann, as assistant.

Dispatches received here early in the day from Cuxhaven announced that the Spanish contestant, Castilla, had dropped into the ocean six miles north of Heligoland and that the navigators Montolo and Robero, had been rescued by fishermen.

Last evening a despatch was received from Molde, Norway, telling of the descent of the Swiss balloon Helvetia, to the ocean and the rescue of Colonel Schaeck and E. Messur. The despatch reads as follows:

"Fishing boat this afternoon rescued occupants of balloon Helvetia at the last moment as they were sinking, the gas being totally exhausted. The balloon was saved. Schaeck and Messur remain here over night and proceed to Christiansund tomorrow."

Molde is only 32 miles southwest of Christiansund and in order to reach this point the Helvetia must have traveled about 1250 kilometres, or 775 miles, in a direct line, and must have travelled over the Skagerrak, or the still greater body of the North Sea. This is by far the greatest distance yet reported to the credit of any of the contestants, the majority of whom either took a somewhat circuitous course or were compelled to descend on account of their proximity of water.

The Helvetia is the fifth balloon among the international contestants to come to grief, the Conqueror and the Montanus bursting at a high altitude, and the Saint Louis and Castilla being wrecked on the North Sea. All though no casualties followed these disasters, the escape of the ten men who were passengers in the unfortunate balloons was miraculous.

THE PRESIDENT'S SILENCE.

The recent silence of Mr. Roosevelt is becoming ominous. It is feared by his friends that he will experience something in the nature of an explosion if he cannot vent his feelings in favor of Taft before the election is over. His last venture in that line, however, went wrong and was calculated to injure rather than help Taft. Mr. Bryan gave him a delightful dressing and taught him a much needed lesson in regard to entering a public controversy.

DUTY OF DEMOCRATS.

Now that registration is over it is the duty of democrats to work hard for the success of their ticket. Here in Lowell, besides giving loyal support to the national ticket headed by William Jennings Bryan, the democrats will have to stand by their candidate for senator, James E. O'Donnell. Mr. O'Donnell has a very creditable record in the legislature, having in various ways promoted the interests of his constituents and of the city of Lowell through legislative channels.

HOSPITAL FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

The city of Lawrence is to have a hospital for tuberculosis. It appears that in that city last year there were 143 deaths from this disease, while over 1200 persons are at the present time suffering in various stages of the disease and requiring the most skilful medical treatment. If there are so many cases in Lawrence it is safe to say that there are many more in this city, and that such a hospital is needed in Lowell even to greater extent than in Lawrence. The efforts of the General hospital in this city to provide treatment in the summer time is wholly inadequate to meet the situation. We need a hospital all the year round. Lawrence is to be congratulated on having established a hospital by which the ravages of this disease may be successfully combated.

ORGANIZED LABOR WITH BRYAN.

Organized labor throughout the country is showing very commendable loyalty to the policy of Mr. Gompers and John Mitchell in supporting Mr. Bryan. The central unions of New York and Philadelphia have formally adopted Bryan resolutions, and the same course has been followed by labor bodies in several other important labor centres.

Meanwhile the republicans are endeavoring to check the influence of Mr. Gompers' campaign by charging that he has promised to "deliver" the labor vote to Mr. Bryan. Working men of intelligence know this to be a piece of republican claptrap, and it is on a par with some of the things said about the democratic party by Candidate Debs who is evidently working for Taft more than for socialism.

EVEN DALZELL IS SCARED.

From every part of the country comes the intelligence that the republicans are on the run all along the line. For the first time since he entered congress, a quarter of a century ago, John Dalzell, who may be regarded as the high priest of Dingleyism, is making a personal canvass of his district. He feels quite as much alarmed as does Speaker Cannon.

The standpatners are aroused throughout the country as never before. They foresee a democratic landslide and are trying to avert it. Appeals are being made to Wall Street and to money kings for increased contributions, and orders are being sent quietly along the line to intimidate labor into voting for Taft by the threat that should Bryan be elected the mills and work shops will be shut down for an indefinite period. The toilers are not disposed to be thus coerced nor to accept a bluff that is intended to help re-elect the republican ticket.

THE NEW HAVERHILL CHARTER.

The city of Haverhill has adopted a new city charter modeled on the Des Moines commission plan. The features of this new charter are so radically different from any city charter now in force in this state that the progress of the Haverhill city government under the new system will be watched with great interest by the other cities of the state. The government is to be concentrated in the hands of the mayor and four aldermen who will displace the twenty-two members of the city council. The mayor is to receive $2500 a year and the four members of the commission $1000 each. Party designations are to be eliminated and the "recall" and referendum, two of the most radical provisions of the western charters are also included in the new charter.

By the "recall," officials duly elected may be removed during their term of office by popular vote on account of some specified cause.

The initiative and referendum may be applied to the change of city ordinances so that the people of Haverhill can rejoice in having the most democratic charter in this part of the country. The school board is preserved as a separate body under the statutes, and it is provided that no appropriation can be made unless after a week's written notice. The charter was drawn by Judge Charles J. Winn assisted by Justice Moody of the federal supreme court and United States District Attorney Boyd B. Jones. Were it not for the high reputation and the wide influence of these three men the people of Haverhill would scarcely have dared to vote for a charter having such radical provisions. There is little doubt, however, that the new charter will work well in practice, and if any defect should be found, as is likely to be the case, it can be easily remedied by a special act of the legislature.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WANT TO KNOW WHY

Providence Tribune. It is in his annual Thanksgiving proclamation, President Roosevelt finds many things for which to be grateful, some of the examples he has made may be pardoned for insisting that he point them out.

GLAD TO SEE IT TRIED

Boston Post. In some ways it would be surprising should the court hold the new Haverhill charter invalid because technically defective. All of us would like to see the experiment tried of government by commission, even in the incomplete method proposed in Haverhill. At least it is worth trying to see it tried in Haverhill rather than in our own town.

LIQUOR ADVERTISING

Springfield Union. Because a newspaper may not advocate non-licensing, it being that the liquor traffic is better regulated by the license system, we have sometimes heard it said that the newspaper is influenced solely by business considerations. Of course we don't expect to get much help from the newspaper, said a non-licensing worker speaking at a rally in one of the western cities recently. "Because they have too much regard for these liquor advertisements. Their consciences are dulled by the receipts of the counting room." This is a view that seems to obtain quite generally among those that are working for temperance through the medium of no-licensing. It is a pity that almost any newspaper published in no-licensing territory, and it will be seen that the business interests of the paper are well served by local prohibition. Take, for instance, that excellent newspaper, the Birmingham Age-Herald, published in "dry" Alabama. A recent issue contains 115 inches, or more than five columns, of liquor advertisements, mostly of Chattanooga, Tenn., dealers. These advertisements invite the citizens of Birmingham to send in their money, and the goods will be shipped in "plain packages." From this it would appear that no-licensing is a business advantage to a newspaper commercially, for where a license obtains a newspaper derives little revenue from liquor advertisements.

PEOPLE OF NOTE

Miss Annie S. Pack of Providence, R. I., who has just succeeded in climbing Mount Hancan in the Andes, is a graduate of Michigan university, class of 1875, studied in Germany and Athens and was for a time professor of Latin in Smith college. She is a believer in woman suffrage, and declares that if one woman has perseverance to climb to the top of a 26,000 foot mountain the sex in general ought to be able to get the right to vote.

Oreille Wright, who has been lying at the Fort Myer hospital since the wreck of his aeroplane several weeks ago, will be allowed to return to Dayton, Ohio, in about three weeks to finish his convalescence at home, according to the opinion of the physicians attending him. No uneasiness is felt over Mr. Wright's condition, but it has been found that his nervousness has increased from the forced inaction, and that any protracted conversation sends his temperature up a little. Nearly all visitors are in consequence denied access to him. It is now thought likely that Mr. Wright will be able to carry out his wish and finish the tests he had begun when the accident brought him to a sudden stop. The time limit for answering the requirements of the war department has been so extended that the final tests will not come off until some time next summer, and Mr. Wright is determined that he will "make good" before they are over.

that London is rapidly becoming a modernized city.

"Why," said the Englishman, "we are building skyscrapers here the same as you have in New York. Look at this one which has just been completed," and he pointed to the British Medical Association building, in the Strand. "Doesn't that look like New York?"

Mr. Powers carefully scrutinized the structure—six stories—and said: "In New York they would call that a cellar."

Plans have been completed throughout Connecticut for an elaborate celebration on Friday of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Noah Webster. Special features have been arranged in New Haven and Hartford, both of which claim him as a native—Hartford because of his birth there and New Haven because it was there his books were written. It is likely that all over the country school children will devote the afternoon to exercises in honor of the man who compiled the dictionary, gave the country its first spelling book and its first grammar. At Yale the exercises will centre on his philological work. Webster wrote his dictionary largely in New Haven, beginning it about 1798 and finishing it twenty years later. Several years of that time, however, were spent in Andover, Mass., limited his financial resources were hindered and he could find no publisher there. His stay in Andover set under way the movement which culminated in the founding of Amherst college. Webster was born in 1758 in Hartford, prepared for Yale at the home of his father and was graduated in the class of 1778. In his junior year he left his studies to shoulder a musket and help in repelling Burgoyne's invasion. He died in this city in 1843, at the age of 84. He is buried in the Grove street cemetery, beside Ell Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin.

President Eliot of Harvard university has invited "Jim" Fagan to deliver a course of lectures to the students and others on railroad matters and other subjects. James G. Fagan is not a railroad president, nor an official of any kind, but he is a tower of strength to the man on the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine railroad. Fagan seems to know more in a common sense way about the railroad problem or problems of this country than any man who has appeared since the railroad question became one of the hot topics of discussion. He has published a book entitled "Confessions of a Railroad Signalman." He is a thorough student of other subjects as well, being widely read and well informed.

Wm. Archer, the critic and prophet of Bolshevism, has been writing to the London Morning Leader on the subject of "American Manners." In the article he says:

"Are the Americans the politest people on the face of the earth? Or the rudest? There are times when I would reply to the former question with a cheerful affirmative; but other times when my whole smarting soul goes over with vehemence to the other opinion. The truth is, of course, that in America as in other countries different classes of people have different standards of manners; so that any all-embracing generalization is absurd. But first for the other and more essential side of the case. There is certainly no being creature that stands higher in the scale of true humanity than your cultivated, kindly American gentleman. His manner is delightful and he is unwearying, not only in hospitality, but in the still higher quality of considerate helpfulness.

"New York city from an architectural point of view is so absolutely ridiculous, unreasonable, and most stupid as to make it appear, in fact, as though planned by a lunatic." This is the opinion of M. Augustin Rey, French architect, member of the superior council of the Dwelling Houses of Paris, and official representative of the French government at the recent International Tuberculosis congress in Washington. In coming to this conclusion M. Rey said he had in mind particularly the skyscrapers of which New Yorkers are so proud. "They are very dangerous," he declared, speaking through his friend, George B. Ford, who acted as interpreter, "and within twenty years the city will require even the highest to be chopped in half, because the public will be aroused to the menace they bring to the community. In twenty years the income from these huge buildings will have paid for their construction, and by that time the public will rise up and alter things." As for the reasons why skyscrapers were dangerous and a menace to the community, M. Rey said the congestion they caused was one reason; that is to say the immense number of people they temporarily housed caused the congestion.

LABOR DELEGATE

Passed - Away at St.
John's Hospital

The delegates to the state convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor now being held in Lowell were shocked and filled with grief to learn of the death of one of their number. Reference is made to Jeremiah Mahoney, the delegate from Springfield to the labor convention here. He was taken suddenly ill with acute pneumonia Tuesday night and passed away last night at 10 o'clock at St. John's hospital. Mr. Mahoney's wife was with him during his last moments.

The deceased was a member of the Cigar-makers' union of Springfield and represented that organization at the Lowell convention. He is a resident of 26 Norwood street, Springfield, and at the time of his death was aged 59 years. He is survived by, besides his wife, several children, the oldest being 18 years of age and the youngest four years old. He was spoken very highly of by those intimately acquainted with him.

Many of the guests were members of the various military organizations of Lowell. During intermission a collection was served, Henry Brothers catering. Music was furnished by the Cadmus orchestra. The highly efficient committee in charge was: General manager, Grace C. Major; assistant general manager, J. L. Van Steenburgh; floor director, Pauline C. LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Frank Lator, of "Coming Thro' the Rye" fame, presented his latest comic opera, "Prince Humbug," before two large audiences yesterday afternoon and last night.

Lator was as funny as ever and his songs were decidedly clever. They were "Stung," "Hoolihan," and "Gooey-Go," and the first was the best. Very taking, too, was his duet with Miss Florence Morrison, "Reina." Miss Morrison by the way, as the queen, made a big hit. She sang and acted very well. Miss Marion Garson was quite pleasing, and her singing was fine, especially in a duet with Harold Crane, who was the prince. Miss Jeanette Bageard, formerly prominent with Rogers Brothers, was excellent. The comedians besides the star were George Pearce and Will H. Sloan. Mr. Sloan made much fun with his German dialect. Claire Grenville was excellent as the wife of the major, played by Mr. Pearce.

GANS-NEELSON PICTURES

Beginning tonight for a three days' engagement, at the Opera House, the great Gans-Neelson film pictures will be shown, there being several comic pictures, for there is a vast interest in these wonderful pictures, which can only be satisfied by actually seeing them. The full 21 rounds will be shown and the knock-out. The pictures were sent in New Haven, Tuesday evening, and the Palladium speaks thus of them: "Moving pictures galore were the attraction at the Grand Opera House last evening, there being several comic pictures as preliminaries to the advertised Gans-Neelson fight pictures. By the time the pictures were ready to start there was a crowded house present. The pictures were clearly shown, and were interesting from start to finish, there being shown the battle ground and the crowd in a vivid manner. The every action of the fighters was portrayed, and to those who saw them, a sight well worth seeing was shown." Ladies as well as men go to see these pictures, for there are absolutely no unpleasant features connected with them, and they are of fully as much interest to ladies as the men.

SKY FARM

Scenically, "Sky Farm" is a delight to the eye. The picture of the maple forest, with its knee-deep of fallen leaves, its bright reds, golden yellows and marvelous hues of the autumnal quarter, is a masterpiece of stagecraft. The view of the valley below Sky Farm is one of the sunniest ever shown before the footlights. In the barn scene, where the big village dance takes place, the spectator almost feels the exhilarating aroma of new mown hay and the corn stalks in the racks. These several settings are wonderful examples of facility in color and detail.

50 MILES FROM BOSTON

The song hits of George M. Cohan's rural musical play, "Fifty Miles from Boston," which Messrs. Cohan and Hatis will present at the Opera House, have reached a wide popularity. They are, "Waltz With Me," "Jack and Jill," "Harrigan," "The Boys Who Bring the Flames," "My Smaller Town Girl," and "Ain't It Awful."

"THE SIX AMERICAN DANCERS"

HATHAWAY'S THEATRE

"The Devil," being presented by Preston Kendall and company at Hathaway's theatre, this week, will stimulate thought. It is cleverly done and is a condensation of the most salient points in the noted Hungarian drama, now running successfully in the big cities of two continents. The reality of the story is the real attraction, which is filled most acceptably by Miss Fisher, while the young artist who is forced to listen to the philosophy of "Dr. Steinfeld" is played by Mr. Gordon.

The "Six American Dancers" surely have any other theatrical act in the city. The three young women and young men, six in all, perform wonders on the stage floor. Charles Leonard Fletcher, an impressionist north of the city, displays a rare insight into character. His impersonation of Mark Twain, at the banquet table, is one of much loyalty, even as to vocal distinction. The three Dickens characters are welcome. Mr. Fletcher concludes his act with the lighthouse scene from "Shore Acres."

The other acts on the bill are: Gray & Graham, in a farce of music and comedy; Robert's animals, the jokers; Griffith the juggler and the escapee. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening during the remainder of the week, while Saturday afternoon Robert's animals will be not through a few extra paces for the children.

A TELEPHONE ALARM

OPPOSITE CITY HALL

THEATRE VOYONS

Today the Theatre Voyons offers as its feature picture "A Ranchman's Love" and it will surely please. This picture was taken in the state of Washington in the wildest part and the stage pictures are superb. The story the picture tells is one of interest not only from a sentimental standpoint but it is sensational, too. The characters are all expert horsemen and their individual bravery and daring lend much to the interest of the story.

THE BRIGHAM LECTURES

Nat M. Brigham's course of illustrated lectures, the first one of which, "The Apache Warpath," is to be given in Colonial hall on Tuesday night, should prove a success in Lowell for two reasons. In the first place, Brigham was a member of the notable Unitarian church choir of 30 years ago, before he went west to the plains, and has a host of old friends here who should give him a hearty greeting. In the second place, his lectures rank with those of the late John L. Stoddard and Burton Holmes and are beautifully illustrated and of absorbing interest. They represent years of study and are a part of Brigham's own life on the frontier, and they cannot be heard without great profit as well as pleasure to the audience. The sale of tickets is now on at Edward Ellingwood's drug store, and it is urged that tickets be secured at once. The course is $1.50, and single admission 60 cents. A special rate has been made for high school, textile school and Normal school pupils, 75 cents for the course.

BILL McKINNON

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 12.—Bill McKinnon's aggressiveness won him a draw in his second battle with Jack Robinson of Chicago last night, for, although the Windy City middleweight had the better of the last seven rounds, the Boston boxer's early lead and his willingness to occasionally mix it throughout the bout was a bit of an even break.

McKinnon, who Tuesday night had engaged in a hard ten-round battle with Arthur Connolly at Boston, N. H., showed no effect from the previous bout, and his fight record was not an indication of his best finish. It was a hard, fast bout, both men putting up a steady, well-executed fight.

In the semi-finals of the Boston fight, McKinnon's willingness made a big hit with the crowd, because there were some among the spectators who thought that Robinson should have won on account of his best finish. It was a hard, fast bout, both men putting up a steady, well-executed fight.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC

It would be difficult to find a cleverer or more evenly balanced stock company than the Deshon-Pitt company which this week is giving a most admirable presentation of Lillian Mortimer's latest absorbing melodrama "A Girl's Best Friend" which is pleasing large audiences this week despite the strong counter-attractions. The local theatre-goers have acquired the habit of attending one performance weekly at the Academy of Music and they have been well repaid. The company will present "A Girl's Best Friend" for the remainder of the week, and next week will be seen in a grand production of "Under Two Flags."

MATRIMONIAL

A very pretty fall wedding took place yesterday afternoon in St. Michael's church when Mr. John J. Riley, the well-known drummer for the Dempsey Co., was united in wedlock to Miss Esther Hurley, of Second street. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. John J. Shaw. The groom was attended by Mr. John Kelley, who acted as best man, and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Hurley.

After the marriage the bridal party returned to the bride's home on Second street, where the wedding reception was held. The presents received by the couple were of the most beautiful and costly kind and included rich tokens of esteem from the friends of the happy couple.

The bride was attired in a most becoming sheath gown of white silk, which was outlined with prince lace. She also wore a picture hat and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. The bridegroom wore a tuxedo and a charming pink hat. She carried a bouquet of tea roses.

A new departure in the way of ushers was used at the wedding. Miss Sadie Boyle of this city and Miss Nellie Sexton of Dorchester acted in that capacity. The bride gave presents of real stick pins to the ushers while the groom gave tokens of a diamond ring and diamond stick pin to the bride and best man.

An orchestra furnished the music at the house. The parlor was tastefully decorated with potted plants. Friends were present from New York, Pittsfield, Fitchburg, North Andover, Lawrence and Methuen.

The young couple departed on the 7:35 train for Boston, on their wedding tour. They will visit Atlantic City and will spend the next month in close proximity to that favorite resort. Upon their return they will reside at 25 Second street. They enter married life with the best wishes of a host of friends.

The house was tastefully decorated with hydrangeas and chrysanthemums. The gifts were very numerous and costly and represented the well wishes of a host of friends of the young couple. After a short wedding trip they will reside at Concord, N. H.

Evans catered. On the same night Mr. Montmarquet was banqueted by bachelor friends at the club des Citoyens Americans.

INCENDIARY FIRE

Caused Loss of $75,000 in Worcester

WORCESTER, Oct. 15.—The Church of Notre Dame on Park street, suffered serious damage by fire last night, and two other buildings, occupied by a number of small business firms were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $75,000, of which $30,000 falls on the church.

The fire started in the fruit and wall paper establishment kept by Samuel Stewart in the large wooden building which was formerly used as the Norwich and Worcester railroad station. The roof of the church was partly burned off and the interior badly gutted. The cause of the fire is not known, but the police are inclined to believe that it was of incendiary origin.

MAY BE FATAL

"STEEPLEJACK" HURT, BY FALL FROM STACK

FRANKLIN, Oct. 15.—John Davis, aged 25 years, a painter, well known as a "steeple jack" throughout the country, and whose home is in South Bellingham, fell 40 feet from a South Bellingham printing company's building on Fisher street yesterday and sustained probably fatal injuries. Davis was sitting on a seat scaffold, painting the iron smokestack, which is built in sections, when a portion of the stack toppled over and he was precipitated to the ground. Help from the Heliotype works went to the aid of the injured man, who was unconscious when they reached him. Dr. J. D. Coughlin, had him removed to the town farm for treatment. Davis regained consciousness half an hour after the accident. His left leg was broken, two ribs broken, the back of his head cut and bruised and his face cut. It is feared that he sustained internal injuries.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS

The marriage of Miss Florence Donovan of Lowell and Mr. Alfred Outim, of Foxboro is to take place next week. Last night a number of the girl friends of Miss Donovan assembled at her residence on School street, this city, and were there entertained. A luncheon was served. Among the guests present were Misses Borthin and Andrea. Misses Grace and Edith. Plans of a Nassau.

Last week Miss Donovan was given a "letter" by her former schoolmates at Notre-Dame academy, at the home of Mrs. Louis Lambert in Salem street. Many delightful gifts were presented to her.

She did not note anything in the stories that had been told about Mrs. Shaw as familiar. The stories seemed ridiculous to her.

Asked if she knew anything about Mrs. Shaw's treatment of her husband and son, Mrs. Ramsey said that she knew Mrs. Shaw had been always kind and considerate in her treatment of them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan, Mrs. Ramsey said she had attended ten lectures at temple Spenta Maria, Lowell.

"Did you buy any of the books?" asked Mr. Jordan.

"I did not," she replied. "I spoke to your husband about Mazdaznanism."

"I did. We talked about it more or less."

"Are you as much interested in Mazdaznanism now as you were then?" "I didn't continue going to the lectures."

"Did you ever hear Mr. Hanish?" "I did."

"You attended these lectures in company with Mrs. Shaw, did you not?" "I met Mrs. Shaw and perhaps walked back and forth with her to and from the lectures."

Witness said she believed Mrs. Shaw to be perfectly sane.

Mrs. Ramsey was on the witness stand when court adjourned for dinner. Mr. Kittredge said that Mrs. Hilton, it had been reported, had exercised great mental influence over Mrs. Shaw and he said that he would request that Mrs. Hilton be given leave to withdraw from the court room while

Continued.

In the Shaw conservator hearing at Cambridge yesterday afternoon John W. McEvoy was sworn in and testified as follows:

John W. McEvoy, Esq., of Lowell was sworn.

He had done business for Mr. Shaw. He had made a will, a temporary will, for Mr. Shaw, a will that afterward was destroyed. That was about 20 years ago.

Mr. McEvoy said he met Mrs. Shaw off and on for years. He did not note any change in Mrs. Shaw, mentally or physically.

Witness said Mr. Shaw frequently spoke about how helpful his wife was, and what she was doing to contribute to the success of his business.

"Did you ever hear Mrs. Shaw speak disrespectfully of her husband or son?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"No, she always spoke very respectfully of them."

"Did you ever hear any reference to monkey origin, or ape origin, or anything of that sort?"

"Never."

Mr. McEvoy said he had talked with Mrs. Shaw recently, not in a professional way, about her business and he thought her mind was clear and her judgment good.

In reply to Mr. Kittredge, Mr. McEvoy said he thought that Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were worth about $50,000.

Mrs. Frederick W. Farnham, wife of Mayor Farnham, testified as a neighbor and friend of Mrs. Shaw. Mrs. Farnham did not notice anything peculiar about Mrs. Shaw. She had not noted any change in her condition. She knew that Mrs. Shaw was much interested in charities.

Mrs. Thomas A. Ramsey said she knew Mrs. Shaw for the last 25 years, had visited her house and Mrs. Shaw visited her house.

She never heard Mrs. Shaw speak of any visions, never saw any altar in the house. Witness had been in room that had been occupied by Mr. Shaw and Maxfield and did not note anything peculiar there.

She did not note anything in the stories that had been told about Mrs. Shaw as familiar. The stories seemed ridiculous to her.

Asked if she knew anything about Mrs. Shaw's treatment of her husband and son, Mrs. Ramsey said that she knew Mrs. Shaw had been always kind and considerate in her treatment of them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan, Mrs. Ramsey said she had attended ten lectures at temple Spenta Maria, Lowell.

"Did you buy any of the books?" asked Mr. Jordan.

"I did not," she replied. "I spoke to your husband about Mazdaznanism."

Mrs. Shaw was on the stand. His plea was a very earnest one.

Judge McIntire stated that he had warned anybody against interfering in any way with the witness by hypnotic or other influence and he believed that with that warning there was anybody in the court room who would dare to interfere.

Mr. Kittredge renewed his request for the removal of Mrs. Hilton and finally said that if the court did not see fit to have her leave the room that she might be assigned to another seat, a seat, he said, wherein she would not be in a position to see the witness face to face. The court allowed the suggestion and Mrs. Hilton was given a side seat.

It was stated today that the district attorney's office of Middlesex county would start an investigation of the Mazdaznan society of Sun. Worshipers, but inquiry at the office of the district attorney elicited the information that no such investigation was contemplated and that no suggestion relative to it had reached that office.

State Officer Charles E. Byrne dropped into the probate court room when the case was on this forenoon, and that fact, it appears, started the report that District Attorney Higgins was investigating himself in the case.

When court came in at 2 o'clock Mrs. Ramsey resumed her testimony.

"Did your husband forbid you to attend the Mazdaznan lectures?"

"He did not."

"Did he ever call it the 'popcorn society'?"

"What was his apparent attitude toward it?"

"He didn't care anything about it."

Mr. John M. Farrell, auctioneer, the man who sold Mrs. Shaw's house, testified.

Mr. Farrell said he had not talked with Mrs. Shaw until she sent for him to sell her house. Several days were occupied in preparing for the sale.

Mrs. Shaw said there were things in the house, the best things, that she did not feel like parting with and she arranged the sale that way.

Mr. Farrell said that Mrs. Shaw's house was very neat and orderly.

Asked to tell his observations as to his method of doing business, Mr. Farrell related his conversation with Mrs. Shaw relative to the sale. Mrs. Shaw attended the sale and assisted in every way she could.

Witness did not hear of any visions or other outlandish things. Asked as to the value of real estate in Tyler Park, Mr. Farrell was about to explain, when Mr. Kittredge objected. He wanted to ask witness questions, to see if he might qualify. He qualified, and in answer to the question as to value of the Shaw property, he said, "$8,000."

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan, witness said he did not see Mrs. Hilton at the sale.

Witness said that he advertised the property, the Shaw home, and he was responsible for that part of the ad, which said Mrs. Shaw was selling because she had prepared to leave the city or would do that.

Mr. C. E. Bell of Lowell was called and Mr. Wilson asked the question, "Have you of late made a physical examination of Mrs. Shaw?"

Mr. Kittredge objected on the grounds that he had asked to have a physical examination of Mrs. Shaw made and had been refused.

The question then resolved itself into one of an examination of Mrs. Shaw at which experts were sitting. Both sides would be present, but no time was set.

Mr. Wilson was allowed to ask Dr. Bell the question: "What did you find her physical condition to be?"

"Very good indeed for a woman of her age."

Mrs. Charles M. Pikey, wife of the present proprietor of the New American, was called. She knew Mrs. Shaw very well and could note no change in her condition or appearance.

Included in the witnesses at this afternoon's hearing were Lieut. James Brown of the local police department, Thomas Ramsey of the Belvidere hotel and Charles E. Carter, the well known druggist, who testified that they had known Mrs. Shaw for a number of years, but had never noticed any mental or physical deficiency in her.

Mrs. Ellen Shaw was recalled at 2.15 and it was at this juncture that Lawyer Kittredge asked that Mrs. Hilton be removed from the court room.

In response to the direct examination of Mr. Kittredge Mrs. Shaw testified: "I am 66 years old, I learned to read and write in the district country school, attending school a few months in spring and in the fall. I never had any education beside that. At 14 I worked at home and had no assistance from my parents. I know very little about my mother's people. She had three sisters and a brother, Jesse Maxwell."

Mrs. Shaw then explained the birth and condition of her son, Maxwell, and stated that he was badly injured at his birth and until three weeks old never made a sound. Referring to Mr. Wilson she said that she had never received any advice from Dr. Hanish or Mrs. Hilton relative to the disposal of her property. They had never advised her to sell the house. Her reason for selling was that the house was too big and expensive for her. She had no call for it. She never had any thought of giving it to the Mazdaznans and never told anyone she was going to. She is perfectly capable of handling her own property at the present time.

Mrs. Shaw said the total amount she had contributed to the Mazdaznan cult was $20 of which she gave $30 to the temple in Lowell, $30 to the temple in Montreal, $50 toward the big organ in Chicago, $30 to the Denver temple, $30 to Los Angeles.

Asked relative to her relationship with Mrs. Dutton, she replied that Mrs. Dutton lived with her as a girl and that she and Mr. Shaw had had considerable trouble and Mr. Shaw had often expressed the wish that she go away and never come back.

"What did your husband think of Mrs. Dutton as regards to her reputation for truth and veracity?"

"I have heard him say that she was incapable of telling the truth."

Mrs. Shaw was on the witness stand at four o'clock when court adjourned till ten o'clock tomorrow.

DO YOU KNOW ANY SKIN SUFFERERS?

If You Have a Friend Afflicted With Eczema, tell the Druggist About It.

If you have a friend suffering from eczema, tell us about it the next time you are in the store.

Many eczema sufferers have tried so many useless remedies and spent so much money with doctors that they practically despair. If they only knew of the simplest home cure for eczema it is nothing more than oil of wintergreen compound (as mixed in D. D. D. Prescription).

Used with glycerine, thymol and other healing ingredients in liquid form, this simple remedy penetrates the pores of the skin, numbing and killing the eczema germs while building up the healthy tissue.

If you will suggest to your friend afflicted with eczema to call, we shall be glad to explain to any sufferer about D. D. D. Prescription.
